DERAILMENT — Baltimore and Ohio Railroad workmen are shown repairing rails damaged about 2:15 p.m. Monday near the Fayette County Airport when six cars and the caboose of a B&O freight train jumped the tracks. Four of the derailed cars were loaded; three with plastic materials and the other with scrap materials. None of the cars overturned. The 35-car train was bound for Cincinnati from Newark. The cause of the derailment is uncertain. F. L. Ricketts and John Trimble, both of Newark, were the train's engineer and conductor.

Delta jet crashes; fear 85 are dead

BOSTON (AP) — A Delta Airlines DC9 jet carrying 90 persons aboard crashed and disintegrated on landing at Logan International Airport in heavy fog today. Police said it had reports 85 persons died.

Only two survivors were reported initially by Massachusetts General Hospital.

An eyewitness said the twin-engine plane crashed on a runway about 1,000 feet from the edge of the water at the busy airport that juts into Boston Harbor.

State police said it appeared that the jet struck a seawall at the approach to the airport. A state police spokesman said there was a break in the 2½-foot high wall, indicating the craft's landing gear had struck it.

An observer said personal effects and parts of bodies were strewn all over the runway.

He said the plane, arriving on a flight from Burlington, Vt., seemed to have disintegrated on impact.

He said the largest portion of the plane he could see was a 10-foot portion of the fusilage.

State police said a temporary morgue was set up at the airport fire station at the airport.

Reports from the scene said numerous vehicles drove to the crash site to collect bodies from the debris and mud. Some of the vehicles became mired in the mud.

Haldeman claims tapes refute Dean testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential chief of staff H. R. Haldeman testified today that he approved a $90,000 campaign budget for "black projects" prior to the Republican national convention last year. He said he didn't know what the projects were.

Haldeman began answering questions of the Senate Watergate committee after testifying Monday that he listened to two White House tapes he said refute John W. Dean III's testimony about two key meetings with President Nixon.

Haldeman acknowledged that he had approved a memorandum, dated Feb. 3, 1972, seeking campaign funds for White House political projects, such as presidential travel and mailings to special-interest groups. Among the items was $90,000 for "black projects" to be carried out by Charles W. Colson, another White House adviser.

Asked what the projects were, Haldeman said, "I'm not sure." He said he didn't think they had anything to do with previously disclosed "black advance" work, because Colson wasn't an advance man.

Former campaign aide Robert C. Mardian testified earlier that he was told the Nixon reelection campaign had an extensive budget for "black advance" work, which he described as political sabotage.

Haldeman said the budget memo only covered campaign funds that would be needed through Aug. 20, 1972, the time of the Republican convention.

Committee chief counsel Samuel Dash initiated the interrogation of the former presidential aide by asking a long line of questions about Haldeman's education, his previous associations with Nixon, and his role as administrative boss of the White House staff.

Haldeman said he ran a "tight ship" at the White House, reaching for a goal of "zero defects."

"We tried to do everything right," Haldeman said.

Haldeman, once the President's closest aide, told the panel in a 94-page opening statement Monday the tapes do not support Dean's assertion that Nixon knew of the Watergate cover-up months before Nixon said he learned of it.

The former White House chief of staff said his recollection of the meetings, refreshed by listening to the tapes, confirmed that many of the subjects Dean said were discussed were in fact taken up—but he directly contradicted Dean's version of those portions that would implicate the President.

Haldeman also testified that Dean appeared to be genuinely confused about a third meeting between the three men because subjects Dean said came up at that meeting actually were discussed a week later.

The Senate panel is preparing to go to court, probably this week, in an effort to force Nixon to release the tapes. The disclosure that Haldeman had listened to two of them immediately raised the question of why he should have access when the committee and special prosecutor Archibald Cox had been refused.

Later, the White House said two other Nixon aides—J. Fred Buzhardt and Stephen Bull— had listened to two tape recordings.

Haldeman said he listened to the tape of a March 21 meeting while he was still chief of staff, but the recording of a Sept. 15, 1972, meeting was made available to him in July, after Dean had testified and after Haldeman had resigned from the White House staff.

"I think it's a strange thing that Mr. Haldeman can hear the tapes, but this committee cannot hear them," said Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the panel.

According to Dean, whom Nixon fired as presidential counsel, the Sept. 15 meeting was the first indication Dean had that Nixon was aware of the cover-up. That was the day the indictments came down against the original seven defendants.

The 34-year-old lawyer testified "The Campaign bill's future uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — An uncertain future lies ahead in the House for a Watergate spawned campaign reform bill passed by the Senate.

The bill, intended to curb "big-money influence" in elections, would sharply limit campaign contributions and campaign spending and establish an independent enforcement agency.

While the Senate was passing the bill 82-to-8 Monday, the House balked at even considering a bill to open the way for congressional pay raises in this non-election year.

The vote in the House was 237 to 156 against taking up the pay bill which the Senate passed July 9 with no debate or roll call vote.

So far the House has shown scant interest in the type of campaign financing legislation passed by the Senate. Some senators suggested it had been made so restrictive that it is unlikely to survive in the House.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, praised some features of the bill but said it may do more to re-elect incumbents than to reform campaigns.

But Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the bill's controls on campaign spending were "a direct response to the Watergate scandal." In that respect, he said, the measure "represents silver lining in the black cloud of Watergate."

Campaign spending for congressional and presidential candidates would be limited to 10 cents for each voting age person in primaries and 15 cents in general elections.

In the case of presidential candidates, on the basis of the latest population figures, this would set a limit of $13.9 million in primaries and $20.8 million in general elections.

The amount Senate candidates could spend in general election campaigns would range up to slightly more than $2 million in California. A minimum of $175,000 would be allowed in the least populous states.

Individuals could contribute no more than $3,000 to a candidate for federal office for each of his campaigns in a primary, general election or runoff. The same limit would apply to political committees.

In addition, a ceiling of $25,000 would be placed on an individual's total contributions in a year to all candidates for federal office and no cash contributions in excess of $50 would be permitted.

A bipartisan, 7-member commission would be established to enforce the legislation and the campaign financing reports required by legislation passed in 1971.

All the members of the Senate Watergate committee voted for the bill except for Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the vice chairman. He voted present after saying the legislation was premature until the committee had concluded its probe.

The Senate passed by voice vote a bill recommended by President Nixon providing for a 16-member commission to make a sweeping study of election laws and the whole electoral process.

The commission would be required to submit its recommendations within a year.

Farm bill again faces veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional conferees, heading to a sixth session on the farm bill today, face a renewed threat of a presidential veto.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said Monday he would recommend a veto unless the final version is in line with a tight budget and a "full-production" national agricultural policy.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., a conferee and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he doesn't know if Butz is bluffing.

Butz "is in the position where he has to give us his asking price rather than his selling price, and I don't believe the conferees are going to make any further concessions," Poage said.

A deadlock over a provision to ban food stamps for most strikers could force the House members of the Senate-House conference committee to go back for instructions from the House on what to do, congressmen said.

Eventual maneuvering might open a way for farm program reformers, who have lost in conference what they had won on the floor, to try forcing their views onto the conferees, they said.

The House itself is bitterly split over the food stamp section. The provision on strikers was accepted by the House 213 to 203, upheld by 210 to 207 and survived final challenge 208 to 207. There is no such ban in the Senate bill.

Meanwhile, Butz said Monday he would urge a veto if the final bill contains a four-year increase of five per cent in minimum milk price supports. Another unacceptable provision, he said, would be more than one year of cost-of-production escalation for the "target prices" being set as crop supports under cotton, wheat and feed grain.

Butz said the provisions to which he objects are inflationary because they would hike federal spending.

Cambodian bombing secrecy 'explained'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon clamped tight secrecy on U.S. bombing of Cambodia when he ordered the action in March 1969, says Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The same secret procedures were used in 1970 to hide B52 raids in Northern Laos, Wheeler told the Senate Armed Services Committee Monday.

Bombing raids against enemy sanctuaries in neutralist Cambodia were approved at the request of U.S. commanders after a month of deliberations by President Nixon and Melvin R. Laird, who was then secretary of defense, Wheeler said.

The President repeatedly directed that the operation be cloaked in maximum security for diplomatic reasons, Wheeler said.

The military devised dual reporting systems, he said. One supplied accurate information to a few persons with a "need to know" and the other supplied false information through normal channels identifying targets in South Vietnam. The latter wound up in the Pentagon's computer files.

Wheeler said there was no intent to deceive those in authority, although erroneous information failing to account for the strikes in Cambodia was given to the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1971 and this year.

The Pentagon confirmed 3,630 B52 sorties into Cambodia from March 1969 to May 1970, after the testimony of former Air Force Maj. Hal Knight that he was ordered to burn records of the secret strikes and substitute false reports.

Wheeler, who retired in June 1970, said that from February 1970 to May 23, 1970, 149 B52 bombing sorties in Northern Laos were identified under the dual reporting system as being in Southern Laos.

He defended the bombing raids as wise from a military standpoint, saying they halved American casualties in Vietnam, which had been 250 a week.

He said Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia knew about the raids and "made no complaint."

Wheeler said he understood Sihanouk had acquiesced, but had to deal with North Vietnam and China and didn't want to acknowledge to his own people that the United States was bombing Cambodian soil with his permission.

Astronauts getting over motion illness

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Skylab 2 astronauts, pronounced on the mend in their struggle with motion sickness, began catching up today on housekeeping chores delayed by their illness.

Although mission doctors said the men were showing signs of improvement, a space walk originally planned for today was postponed again until Saturday.

This delay will give Skylab commander Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma all day Friday for rest and recreation.

Lousma, who has suffered the most from motion sickness, greeted mission controllers with a cheery "good morning, down there, space fans," as the crew's day began.

The astronauts were to continue a regimen of stomach soothing medicine today to prevent the symptoms from bothering them.

Nixon, Tanaka meeting; major discussion scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today begins a two-day conference with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan that will include discussion of a proposed American-Japanese-Soviet oil and gas deal in Siberia.

Nixon and his major Pacific ally are also scheduled to discuss joint approaches to trade, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, European security and the need for increased peaceful use of nuclear energy.

Nixon and Tanaka appear to be less concerned with problems existing between their countries than with finding ways of meeting problems affecting both nations, especially the growing oil shortage.

The two oil-consuming nations are considering jointly developing oil and natural gas facilities in Siberia.

Tanaka, looking forward to a trip to Moscow in October, expected to be briefed by Nixon on the recent Soviet-U.S. summit meeting.

Last year, the problem of China and the huge trade imbalance which was running the United States $4.2 billion into the red were the dominant questions in dialogues with Japan.

Since then, however, Japan has normalized relations with Peking and the United States has opened a liaison office for communication with the Peoples Republic of China. And the trade problem has been rapidly improving with estimates now running to a reduction of the U.S. deficit to around $2 billion this year.

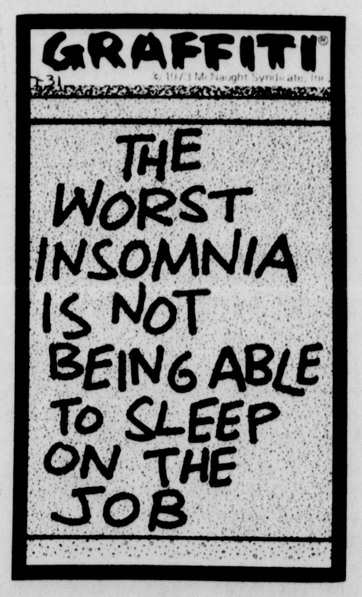

Nixon will also meet this week with President AlbertBernard Bongo of Gabon, the White House announced Monday. Bongo, who has led the African nation since 1967, is in the United States to receive and honorary degree from Duquesne University. They will meet Thursday.

Slain youth's companion under psychiatric care

Paula Gail Lee, the 15-year-old Frankfort, Ky., girl who said she witnessed the murder of Mark B. Matson, 16, of Washington C. H., in a Dade County, Fla., home is reported under psychiatric care in a Louisville, Ky., hospital.

Joseph J. Leary, lawyer and friend of the Lee family, said Paula Gail will remain in the hospital for at least another week. He said he expects Dade County detectives in Louisville Wednesday. Leary said they will show her pictures of Albert Brust, the alleged murderer who claimed his own life, and other pictures, exploring the possibility that a second man was involved.

Paula Gail met the Matson youth at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the couple was picked up by Brust while they were hitchhiking. Brust drove them to his home near Miami where he is believed to have led them to a padded room, ordering them to perform sex acts.

THE GIRL SAID the man killed Matson when the boy tried to resist and then sadistically shackled and raped her for nearly two days. Matson's body was found buried in concrete in a shower stall of Brust's house.

Brust drove the girl back to Fort Lauderdale on July 16, threatening to kill her if she told what had happened.

Brust's body was found five days later, in a lawn chair in his backyard. He apparently drank a concoction of chocolate milk and cyanide.

Police, investigating the suicide, found the remains of young Matson and the soundproof "torture chamber" inside the home. It wasn't until these discoveries were made that police believed the story Paula Gail had told in Fort Lauderdale five days earlier.

PAULA GAIL was returned to Frankfort before the discoveries after her mother told the police that the girl was a habitual liar.

Now, Paula Gail is being kept under close watch in the Louisville hospital. Either her mother or a nurse are with her constantly. "I might as well be in jail," she told a visitor.

The girl, who had run away to Florida from her Kentucky home, said she wants to get out "to play softball," but some of those closest to her are convinced that given the opportunity, she would run away again.

Paula Gail ran away from home on June 30, and along with three companions, was picked up 153 miles from home in Bowling Green, Ky. She was returned to Frankfort and promised to enroll for mathematics classes in summer school. A few days after being returned from Bowling Green, and being enrolled in summer school, she left with the same three companions.

Watergate scandal

President told me I had done a good job and he appreciated how difficult a task it had been and the President was pleased that the case had stopped with (convicted conspirator G. Gordon) Liddy."

Haldeman said the meeting did not open with "anything even remotely resembling" the President telling him what a good job Dean had done.

Dean swore, "I left the meeting with the impression the President was well aware of what had been going on regarding the success of keeping the White House out of the Watergate scandal, and I also had expressed to him my concern that I was not confident that the cover-up could be maintained indefinitely."

Haldeman countered, "I totally disagree with the conclusion that the President was aware of any type of cover-up, and certainly Mr. Dean did not advise him of it at the Sept. 15 meeting."

The March 21 meeting, which both men discussed in similar detail, was by Nixon's own account the source of new information that led him to launch his own broad investigation of Watergate this spring.

According to Dean's account, one of the most incriminating sessions he had with the President occurred on March 13, eight days before the meeting at which he said he gave Nixon a complete picture of the Watergate affair.

On March 13, Dean testified, "I told the President about the fact that there were money demands being made by the seven convicted defendants ... He asked me how much it would cost.

"I told him that I could only make an estimate that it might be as high as $1 million or more. He told me that that was no problem, and he also looked over at Haldeman and repeated the same statement.

"He then asked me who was demanding the money, and I told him it was principally coming from Hunt through his attorney. The President then referred to the fact that Hunt had been promised executive clemency."

Haldeman testified, "Some of what he describes in quite vivid detail as happening on March 13 did, in fact, happen on March 21. I seriously doubt that the conversation John Dean has described actually took place on March 13."

Haldeman said the discussion about the $1 million did come up at the later meeting.

"The President said, 'There is no problem in raising $1 million; we can do that, but it would be wrong,'" Haldeman quoted him.

The dates are significant because by Dean's account the President was aware of the cover-up for many months and cooperated in efforts to perpetuate it.

By Haldeman's account, however, the President didn't gain any incriminating knowledge until March 21, when he says he set in motion the investigation that led to clearing up the whole affair.

Haldeman's lengthy defense of the President was also a defense of himself as the man closest to the President and accused by Dean, Magruder and others of a leading role in the cover-up.

"I had no knowledge or involvement" in the break-in or cover-up," Haldeman swore.

Gas shortage end is seen

LIMA, Ohio (AP)—An executive of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio said Monday the gas shortage in the state will ease by 1975 with the completion of construction of new refineries.

Henry O'Brien, advertising manager at the Cleveland office, said shortages may worsen until new refineries meet current demand.

"We are seeing only the tip of an iceberg right now. Under the tip lies a couple or more years of tight gas supplies," O'Brien told Lima Rotarians.

He said the complete picture includes "this country's coming historic change from self-sufficiency in crude oil supplies to dependence, mainly on Middle East Arab states."

See trade surplus possible in 1974

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government trade analysts say the United States might have a small trade surplus in 1974, reversing a trend that began in 1971 when the value of imports exceeded exports.

The analysts credit the turn around to the two devaluations of the U.S. dollar and a worldwide economic boom that has led to a rising demand for U.S. goods.

The country's trade picture has been improving rapidly and a Commerce Department analyst has declared as outdated a 1973 trade-deficit forecast made just two weeks ago. The analyst said later figures indicated the deficit could be much smaller than the previous estimate of $2 billion to $4 billion.

The country had a quarterly trade surplus of $22.9 million from April through June, the first quarterly surplus since early in 1971.

Exports during the first six months were up about 31 per cent over last year, to an annual rate of $64.5 billion, while imports were up about 19 per cent, or an annual rate of $66.2 billion, which would lead to a 1973 deficit of about $1.7 billion.

U.S. trade was in deficit in 1971 and 1972 for the first time in modern history. A major goal of the devaluations was to improve the country's trade balance and balance of payments position by increasing the cost of imports and reducing the cost of exports.

The flow of U.S. dollars abroad to cover trade and payments deficits flooded the world with a surplus of dollars and was believed largely responsible for international monetary instability.

But the benefits of a trade surplus, if it occurs, will not be immediately apparent to most Americans.

Because of the devaluations, prices of imported goods, such as transistor radios and foreign cars, have gone up, but so have domestic prices because of domestic inflation.

The result is that the consumer pays more for everything.

By slowing the exodus of dollars abroad, the government also hoped to build confidence in the dollar overseas, which may serve to slow inflation at home.

The devaluations had the effect of making the dollar cheaper, because it took less of a foreign currency to buy a dollar than before, or, conversely, more dollars to buy a foreign currency.

Administration economists estimated the dollar declined in value in comparison to key to European currencies by 25 per cent this year alone.

Meat shortage by this weekend reported likely

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The president of a large Midwestern-Southern retail food chain says the nation's supermarkets will run out of many cuts of meat by this weekend.

"The cattle simply are not being brought to market," Lyle Everingham, president of Kroger Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, said Monday.

The beef shortage has forced Kroger to lay off 400 workers in 13 meat-processing plants, Everingham said. He predicted further layoffs unless the Phase 4 price ceiling on beef is lifted.

The federal freeze on beef prices also was cited by a union official in New York City who predicted that "housewives of this city and this nation will find there is little if any beef and beef products to be bought anywhere" by the end of the week.

The ceilings are slated to remain on beef until Sept. 12.

One food chain, Finast, posted signs at meat counters asking customers to be "a good neighbor by buying only what you need so there will be enough for everyone."

The warnings from food retailers and meat processors of an impending meat shortage were disputed by the deputy director of the federal Cost of Living Council, who said meat industry pressure to lift the beef price ceiling would be resisted.

Direct and indirect assaults on the beef price freeze were coming from inside and outside the country.

The Iowa Cattlemen's Association claimed that Canadian meat packers were circumventing the freeze by purchasing cattle in Iowa and Nebraska for processing in Canada and resale in the United States.

Larry Kallem, executive vice president of the organization, said Canadian packers can make a profit because meat imports to the United States were not affected by the price ceiling on domestic beef.

In Seattle, meat packers from a dozen Western states charged on Monday in a federal suit against the Nixon administration that the freeze is discriminatory.

Calling themselves, "scapegoats," the meat packers charged that many companies will have to close or operate at a loss unless the beef freeze ceiling is lifted.

Reds nearer Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodian insurgents edged closer today to Takhmau, only four miles from the edge of Phnom Penh and the key to the city's southern defense line.

Fighting was reported during the night within two miles of Takhmau, and a government communique said three villages south of the town were hit by fire.

Many people have fled their homes along the thickly settled road between Takhmau and Phnom Penh.

Other fighting was reported both north and south of Phnom Penh, but details and casualties were not announced.

On the south, the battlefronts were at the village of Prateah Lang, where a government armored force is trying to outflank the insurgent advance from the southwest; at Wat Sleng, on Highway 3 nine miles from the capital; and at Prek Ho, six miles south of the city.

U.S. B52 bombing missions continued around the clock, pounding at insurgent concentrations and supply routes. American fighter-bombers continued to give close support to government ground forces.

A river convoy of seven oil tankers, four freighters and two tugboats reached Phnom Penh Monday night without losses after the hazardous 60-mile run up the Mekong from the South Vietnamese border. It carried fuel, rice and ammunition.

Safeguards on computer use pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory committee today recommended new safeguards to protect Americans from "Big Brother" misuse of computerized information about their lives.

"Today it is much easier for computer-based record keeping to affect people than for people to affect computer-based record keeping," the 24-member panel told the secretary of health, education and welfare.

The report strongly advised curbing the growing use of Social Security numbers for personal identification and proposed legislative restraints to protect individuals from unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Although there is no immediate danger of a computerized intelligence dossier being compiled on each citizen, because of economic and organizational problems, public concern about such a possibility erodes confidence in government, it said.

"The public fear of a 'Big Brother' system, in effect, focuses on the computer, but it includes other marvels of 20th Century engineering, such as the telephone tap, the wireless microphone, the automatic surveillance camera and the rest of the modern investigator's technical equipage," the report said.

"Such worries seem naive and unrealistic to a data-processing specialist, but as in systems, the apprehension and distrust of even a minority of the public can grossly complicate even a safe, straightforward data-gathering and record-keeping operation that may be of undoubted social advantage," it added.

Showers in the wake of a cold front are expected in Ohio today, according to the National Weather Service, with a chance of the same situation continuing on Wednesday.

Skies were partly cloudy across the state Monday night and showers were reported in the northwest portion where Toledo had around a quarter of an inch of rain. Elsewhere in the state, conditions were dry, although showers and thundershowers were occuring in portions of Indiana, Michigan and Kentucky.

These showers are expected to spread east and northeastward into Ohio later Tuesday, ahead of a cold front situated Tuesday morning from Lower Michigan to Oklahoma. The front is forecast to move eastward into northwestern Ohio Tuesday afternoon, continuing slowly beyond Ohio Wednesday.

A chance of showers continuing Wednesday following the front is predicted, but the outlook for the remainder of the week is for fair weather, with temperatures a little on the cool side.

Generally fair weather is expected in Ohio Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Highs on Thursday will be in the upper 70s, warming to the low and mid 80s by Saturday. Lows will be in the upper 50s and low 60s.

Irish Assembly meets today; trouble feared

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The new legislative assembly meets for the first time today with one-third of its members vowing not to cooperate with the moderate majority.

Security around the legislative building in Stormont Castle on Belfast's outskirts was tight. British troops continued an operation launched 10 days ago to prevent the Irish Republican Army and Protestant extremists from unleashing a wave of violence.

Trouble flared briefly in Londonderry early today when Catholic mobs stoned troops who moved in to remove makeshift barricades thrown up to mark the first anniversary of the storming of IRA strongholds by the army.

People's Democracy, a Roman Catholic civil rights organization, planned a protest march on Stormont today. Officials expressed fear that either Catholic or Protestant guerrillas would use the march as cover for an attack.

But the greatest danger to the assembly, on which the British have pinned their hopes of restoring political stability, probably will come from within.

Solon enters guilty plea in mail fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. J. Irving Whalley of Pennsylvania today pleaded guilty to charges of mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

Whalley, 71, a Republican, served in the House for 12 years. He did not seek re-election in 1972.

The government accused him of forcing 17 staff members to kick back portions of their salaries. Sources close to the case said the staff members kicked back 10 to 20 per cent of their pay for a total "ball park figure" of about $50,000.

The indictment charged that money was used to pay the salaries of Whaley's relatives— prohibited from law from being placed on the congressional payroll—and to defray the costs of his legislative and business enterprises.

Whalley, of Windber, Pa., maintained in a statement released through his lawyers that the funds from employes' salaries were used for office purposes.

Whalley, allowed to be free on his own recognizance by U.S District Court Judge John L. Smith, faces a maximum total possible sentence of 15 years in prison and $11,000 fine.

No sentencing date was set.

Nixon stand on tapes weakened?

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon may have undermined his own legal position against releasing White House tapes to investigators, the chief counsel of the Senate Watergate committee said.

By allowing H. R. Haldeman to listen to one of the tapes after he had become a private citizen, Nixon may have damaged his claim that the tapes are confidential presidential papers, chief counsel Samuel Dash said Monday.

Haldeman told the committee Monday that President Nixon asked him in July to listen to one of the tapes and report to him its contents. Haldeman had resigned as Nixon's chief of staff in April.

Haldeman checked the tape out from the Secret Service, took it home and listened to it alone, he said. He took notes and reported to Nixon on what he heard, the former White House aide testified.

Despite Haldeman's statement, President Nixon remains steadfastly opposed to providing the tapes to the committee and to special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, a White House spokesman said.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon will continue to resist subpoenas for the tapes from Cox and the committee.

The President last talked directly to Haldeman in June, said Warren, refusing to divulge what was discussed.

Warren said J. Fred Buzhardt, special presidential counsel, and Stephen B. Bull, a presidential assistant, also have listened to tapes.

The tape Haldeman said he listened to after leaving office was of a meeting between himself, Nixon and John W. Dean III, then White House counsel, on Sept. 15, 1972.

According to Dean's testimony to the committee, Nixon indicated then that he was aware of the Watergate cover-up. However, Haldeman said the tape failed to support Dean's conclusion.

In a related development, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., charged that Nixon was obstructing justice and covering up the cover-up by refusing to turn tapes and White House documents over to Cox.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson later issued a statement saying from the outset "it was made clear that some documents might be kept away from the special prosecutor on the grounds of executive privilege or some other privilege."

But Cox, Richardson said, has "explicit authority to challenge such privilege in court should he see fit," a move Cox already has taken.

The police chief said Parsittie also was charged with carrying a concealed firearm and Myers with carrying a concealed firearm and a knife.

Downard said the agents were in the parking lot of the Duchess Bar July 18 when they exchanged fire with McCarty. He said an investigation was continuing.

Dollar shows improvement

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar improved today in all key European money markets for the second straight day. It hit its best price in several weeks in Frankfurt, Paris and London, but trading was light.

Dealers said the dollar has been helped by both the reduction in interest rates in West Germany and the recent support buying by government central banks.

In Frankfurt, the dollar moved up quickly shortly after opening from Monday's close of 2.33 marks to 2.35 marks. In Paris, the U.S. currency advanced to 4.12 French francs, up from 4.0887 on Monday.

In London, the dollar gained nearly a cent on the pound with the British currency quoted at $2.4962.

Gold was unchanged in Zurich at $115.50 an ounce. In London, the metal was down 30 cents at $115.20.

Taft backs Delta Queen exemption

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio, was among those urging a Senate subcommittee Monday to go along with the House in exempting the Delta Queen steam boat from marine safety laws.

Taft said the Delta Queen, based in Cincinnati, has proved as safe as "a piece of Americana that has touched the hearts of hundreds of thousands."

The 46-year-old steamboat has already received two safety law exemptions by Congress over the objections of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Coast Guard Adm. William F. Rea III, opposing a proposed five-year extension of the exemption, said the Delta Queen represents a fire risk despite $1 million in fire safety improvements installed by its owners.

William Muster, president of Greene Line Steamers Inc., which owns the boat, contends that the exemption should be permanent.

Muster said no human lives have been lost in a steamboat accident in the company's 86-year history.

He noted that a five-year exemption, already approved by the House, would allow time for further improvements to the Delta Queen and the launching of a much larger steamer in 1975 that will meet all safety standards.

Ohio Inns, Inc., which manages the lodge, has been involved in a labor dispute over union recognition.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The state's taxation agency said Monday, not only have all 1972 income tax refunds been delivered, but some taxpayers may have received two checks.

A department of Taxation spokesman said those who received double refunds will have to return one check.

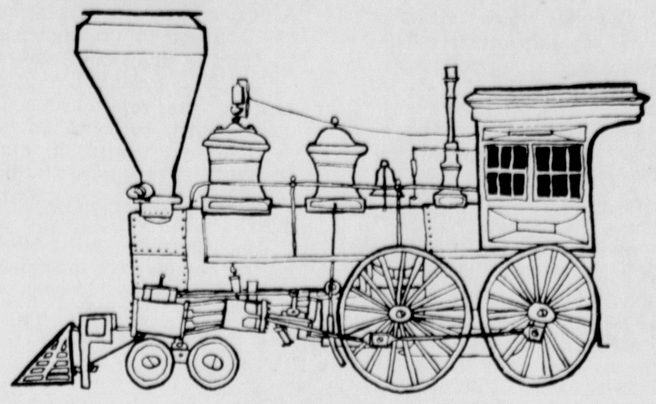

Personal income tax revenue for 1972 amounted to $373.5 million, the department said.

Opinion And Comment

Blame for the oil shortage

Certain widely voiced suspicions about the current petroleum shortage derive some support from a Federal Trade Commission staff study begun two years ago and rushed to completion at the request of Congress.

The study portrays an aura of contrivance and connivance by major oil companies, raising questions as to how genuine the shortage is, and whether it might have been avoided. The majors also are charged with manipulating the shortage to drive out independents.

With bad syntax but good perception, the report says the oil giants "have behaved in similar fashion as would a classical monopolist : they have attempted to increase profits by restricting output."

This, coupled with efforts to reduce competition, is said to have resulted in the closing of an estimated 1,200 independent service stations during the first five months of 1973.

This is a matter of the broadest public interest, a circumstance brought home to all of us by regulatory and voluntary moves to curb use of gasoline. The study should serve as a stimulus for FTC action to increase competition in the petroleum industry.

Congess should do all it can to foster such action.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . by John P. Roche

A question with no answer

For a quarter of a century I have been trying to persuade my students, and colleagues as well, that just because there is a question, there is not necessarily an answer.

In the particular context of American constitutional law, for instance, often the only sensible reply to the question "What did the Framers think" about some topic under current analysis is that, on the available evidence, they didn't think about it at all. In a number of sticky areas — citizenship, for example — one suspects they deliberately ducked, figuring that their descendants could handle those for themselves.

In short, the problem is that sometimes we act as though we knew more about their "intentions" than they did. I have made this point before and apologize for the repetition.

But with subpoenas flying around Washington like paper airplanes and Authoritative Pronouncements filling the press, I believe the point must be emphasized that we are dealing with a political, not a constitutuional crisis.

If we take President Nixon's claims at face value, the separation of powers would provide him with immunity from a traffic ticket. At the other end of the spectrum, everything said or done in the Executive branch — however legitimately sensitive — is allegedly public property. And, to repeat, the Constitution supplies no answers.

TAKE THE NOTION of "Executive Privilege" for example. If you can stand it, let's take an excursion into the past.

Shortly before he left office, President John Adams packed the federal bench with Federalist judges. Their commissions were signed by Secretary of State John Marshall (who for six weeks doubled in brass by also serving as Chief Justice of the United States — an honest man, he took only one salary).

Unfortunatley there was not time to deliver all the commissions, and when the new Secretary of State, James Madison, entered office, he found several lying around, notably one for William Marbury as Justice of the Peace for the District of Columbia.

Whether he consulted President Jefferson on how to dispose of these documents is unknown — they probably went into the fireplace. The indignant Marbury brought action against Madison demanding his commission and the matter went to the Supreme Court in its original jurisdication.

The decision is, of course, famous for Marshall's affirmation of the right of the judiciary to declare acts of Congress unconstitutuional. But that is not our concern here.

It is what happened at the court hearing, which featured Attorney General Levi Lincoln standing in for Madison, who was visiting his sick father. Marshall, who had a sort of paternal interest in those commissions — after all, he had signed them — flatly asked Lincoln what happened to them.

IF LEVI LINCOLN had been up on his Constitution — Nixon style — he would doubtless have pleaded "Executive privilege." Instead he "took the Fifth," that is, he refused to answer on the ground that he might incriminate himself! Marshall did not correct him by suggesting he take refuge in "Executive privilege." On the contrary, the Chief Justice said he was quite within his rights.

A little earlier, in 1796, Madison's views on the powers of the Executive were on the opposite side of the Hill. The House, led by Madison, demanded documents on the Jay Treaty.

Washington, in a brusque reply (probably drafted by Hamilton) told the House that treaties were none of its business. Madison and Jefferson were annoyed, but they couldn't muster the votes to tackle the "Father of Our Country."

Now if anybody wants to take these pieces (and others I can provide) and tell me what the Framers "thought," I'll turn in my Ph.D. and take up farming.

WASHINGTON CALLING . . . by Marquis Childs

A lesson in foreign relations

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. — That slightly absurd term, foreign affairs, ordinarily connotes the corridors of power in world capitals and ministers of state flying off to summit meetings.

Here in the green hills of Vermont is a working example of what foreign relations can mean when practical men come together for a common good.

Springfield has long been the center of a machine-tool industry that does about 15 per cent of the nations's business. The three principal companies have the advanced technology that is one reason for America's great productivity.

They now have contracts with the Soviet Union for tool-making machines that increase their total output and employment by a substantial margin.

For a reporter who spends a great deal of time interviewing solemn diplomats in the corridors of power, it is a welcome change to talk to men who with their advanced technology have forged a small but significant link with another world. They have discovered in going back and forth between Moscow and Springfield how different the two worlds are and yet how much they have in common in technology and the problems of production.

A DELEGATION of Russian machine-tool specialists came to Springfield two years ago after they had seen the products of the Jones and Lamson Co., a subsidiary of Textron, at a machine-tool show in Chicago. That was the start of long and detailed negotiations, ending with a contract as thick as a good-sized telephone book.

The principal machine the company is selling the Russians is, to one who knows next to nothing about machine tools, a marvel of advanced technology. A cylinder of unprocessed steel is put in, buttons are pushed and the operation is carried on by a tape previously programmed by computer.

In a matter of minutes, as the tape ends, the crude steel has been transformed into a handsomely forged machine part complete with grooves for ball bearings and accurate to a thousandth of an inch.

The machines sold by Jones and Lamson will be installed in a tractor plant at Kharkov in the Soviet Union. They will turn out 72 pieces an hour.

The cost of each machine is $165,000, for a contract total of roughly $5.5 million.

WHAT the Americans have learned about the Russians — and presumably the learning process has worked the other way, too — is almost as important as the end result.

John L. Jensen, chief of engineering in the Jones and Lamson plant, has made 10 trips to Moscow to work out the deal. He found his opposite numbers very knowing about machine tools, shrewd yet friendly.

Once they had been convinced by watching a demonstration in Springfield of the machine's capability, the negotiation could begin.

The Russians wanted certain guarantees which the company could not give, since when the machines were installed their operation was no longer under the control of the men who devised and produced them. Once this hurdle was over the deal moved forward rapidly.

In the different approach to production problems that Jensen observed, one was conspicuous. The Soviets wanted a complete layout so that machines would move the parts on the production floor from start to finish. No American company would make that sizable an investment, since it could not be justified by a saving in labor costs.

UNDER the Soviet System it is not the outright cost of say $100 a month for each worker, but the social cost in housing, education, entertainment, etc., that the state provides the worker. The company replied that their best performance was in making a single machine, but if that was what Karkov wanted then okay, and the contract specifies the complete operation.

This is very small compared with some of the pie-in-the-sky deals for Soviet natural gas and oil trumpeted by high-powered promoters. But it is a demonstration of how, in that much-abused phrase, people-to-people understanding can mean practical achievement.

And to one escaping briefly from the furor of Washington it is good to see men like Robert S. Jones, head of the plant who worked up from machine operator and who has been twice in Moscow, directing the kind of production that has made the nation strong.

Slowly, understanding can grow. It can mean peaceful competition coexistence, a phrase so often invoked. That is the reality, rather than the loud political rhetoric of the politicians.

Ex-probation chief named in lawsuit

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The president of a public interest group filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court here Monday charging the former head of the Franklin County Probation Department with false arrest and false imprisonment.

The suit was filed by Concerned Citizens Corp. President John Timson against Jay Smith, who was fired from the probation department last month by the Franklin County Common Pleas Court on a charge of malfeasance.

Timson's suit contends that Smith tried for several years to have him committed to the Columbus State Institute. He is seeking $50,000 in damages.

Make a check on your status

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you be surprised if people suddenly started cutting you up socially or at the office?

Well, you shouldn't be. It is your own fault. Unnoticed by yourself, you have been slowly losing status, and all at once, it seems, people have turned on you.

But they always turn against anyone who doesn't take the trouble to protect his status. In this world you don't need to keep your mind to be successful—but you do have to save face.

How can one safeguard his status? By checking it regularly. How often? Well, if you're the careful type, you'll check it as often as you should brush your teeth—at least twice a day.

Here are a few simple ways to check you status. It is probably triple-A if the following things are true of you:

You have a 10-room suite at the Watergate, but you don't have to testify to the Senate where you got the money to pay the rent.

A state official has arranged that the water in the swimming pool at your country place will be changed once a week at no expense.

They have just struck oil on your 100-acre hideaway island retreat in the Bahamas.

No one in your family has gone to Denmark to have a sex change operation in the last decade, and none of them is planning one.

Nobody in your old neighborhood pool hall dares play you for money anymore because you set the stake so high it makes their cues shake.

You get six free tickets every year to the annual policemen's ball.

Well, it's easy to see how a guy fixed like that doesn't have to worry about being snubbed. But what about the loser? How can he tell when his laurel leaves are withering?

Certainly it's time to do something drastic about improving your status if—

When you find a lucky penny, you put it in a gum-ball machine so you'll have something to chew on to still your hunger pangs.

Your wife hasn't spoken to you since you pawned the family television set at the neighborhood bar. And the bartender won't let you in anymore to watch your favorite program.

When you get on the front end of a bus, everybody else gets off the back end, including the driver.

Federal officials have turned a deaf ear to your plea that they declare you a human disaster area.

Mother wants to keep grad's new nose quiet

DEAR ABBY: For my high school graduation, my parents gave me a new nose. I had it done last week, and even though it's still swollen, I just love it!

I am going east to college in the fall. I will be meeting lots of new kids, and my mother told me that I shouldn't tell anybody I had my nose done. I told her I hadn't planned on wearing a sign saying: "I had my nose done," but if it comes up in a conversation, I am not going to lie about it.

She said it would be foolish for me to admit it, and she asked me to promise her I wouldn't tell anybody.

I respect my mother's opinion, and I know she means the best for me, but I just can't make her that kind of promise. This is the first really serious conflict we have ever had. Am I wrong? Or is she?

NOSE JOB

DEAR NOSE JOB: Mother usually knows best, but not this time.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with Steve and he is very much in love with me. We plan to be married in September. There is only one problem: I am also very much in love with my job.

I'm a secretary and have been with the same company for five years. I intend to keep on working after we are married. I guess you could say I am career-minded.

Steve says before we get married I must promise that I will not work over eight hours a day, and I'll not work at all on Saturdays. Right now I work more than eight hours many days, and I work on Saturdays, too.

Steve doesn't think a woman can be married and have a career, too. I disagree. Abby, do you think it's fair for a man to ask a woman to give up something that means as much to her as my jobs means to me? I love Steve and don't want to lose him, but I also love this job. Please settle this.

STEVE'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: It's all right for a girl to like her job, but if she is "in love" with her job, her love life with a real live man is in trouble. I don't think Steve's requests are un reasonable, but if you do, hold off those wedding bells. I hear a clinker in the belfry.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a way for a couple to be assured they will get the sex child they want? I have heard there is a foolproof method for getting a boy or a girl, whichever the couple prefers. If you know how this can be accomplished with positively no chance of failure, please respond at once, and I will send $25 to any charity you designate.

FATHER OF SIX DAUGHTERS

D E A R FATHER: Yes. ADOPT! Send $25 to your local Planned Parenthood chapter.

D E A R ABBY: Grandma wrote that she was embarassed because her grandson bragged so much about his war record, even saying that he had won 11 purple hearts. She should use an old Jewish saying next time "Junior" starts to boast:

"Do not make yourself so big
You are not so small."

TV Viewing

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This year's fall television premiere will be the most drawn out ever. And it might not be a bad thing.

Debuts of the new shows will stretch from Monday, Sept. 10, until the end of October. The reason, of course, is that the 16-week strike by the Writers Guild of America hit the studios and networks just as they were gearing up for the season.

All but a handful of the series are back in production. The remaining few will go before the cameras in the next few weeks, with probably the latest start set for "Kojak" on Aug. 22.

The networks have not always premiered their new shows in the same week. But one network isn't going to give another the competitive edge, and about three years ago they settled into the present pattern of all starting at the same time.

From the networks' point of view, starting all the shows together in early September makes a lot of sense. Summer vacations are over, schools are back in session, the football season's started and cooler weather and shorter days are just over the hill.

Most important, it ties the premieres into one neat package that can be efficiently promoted into an "event." It's much easier to generate excitement about a single premiere week than a lot of odd starting dates.

But it's always struck me that the networks are somehow missing the boat—and doing a disservice to the viewer and to the film industry.

The viewer is forced to gulp down all the new shows at once. Then by March—except for the midseason replacements—it's all reruns and downhill until September again.

As a viewer, I'd prefer a more flexible system of new shows scattered throughout the year.

TV for the film industry has become strictly a seasonal business of feast or famine. They scramble for a while then sit on their film. It severely limits the amount of work that a writer or actor or director or technician can do. Production that was not limited to a single starting time would allow the industry to become more stable and provide longer periods of employment.

School Foundation allotment received

A net total of $118,395.33 in School Foundation funds was allocated in July to the two districts in Fayette County, according to State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The Washington C.H. City School District was allocated $71,690.72 with $1,773 deducted for school employes' retirement, and $12,849.69 deducted for state teachers' retirement for net receipts of $57,068.03.

The Miami Trace Local School District received a net payment of $61,327.30 after deductions of $3,364 for school employes' retirement, $15,492.94 for state teachers' retirement, and $4,334.33 set aside as the allotment to the County Board of Education. The total allocated to the Miami Trace District was $84,518.59.

The direct allotment to the county board from the state was $945.92.

A net total of $42,538,054.23 was allocated to Ohio's 615 city, exempted village and local school districts during the month.

Phone talks resume today

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Contract negotiations between General Telephone Co. of Ohio and striking employes were to resume today after a three-day recess.

The suspension of talks after three days of bargaining was asked for by company officials to review a new wage proposal by the union.

No details of the new proposal were announced.

About 2,800 Communication Workers of America went on strike July 16 in a dispute over wages.

Originally, the company offered a seven per cent wage hike while the union asked for a 10 per cent boost.

Since the strike began, the company said, service outages as a result of cable cuts and line damages have cost $675,000 to repair.

Man pleads innocent in Lima area deaths

OTTAWA, Ohio (AP) — Eddy Bowers, 40, of Lima, pleaded not guilty in Putnam County Court Monday to first degree murder charges in connection with the deaths of his divorced wife and a physician July 22.

Police said Bowers drove a car which struck and killed his divorced wife, Roberta, 35, and Dr. Will Moody, 53, both of Vaughnsville, who were riding bicycles. The incident occurred in Vaughnsville about 10 miles north of Lima.

MRS. KEITH LINVILLE

South Side Church of Christ is setting for wedding

Miss LaVonne Coulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter, and Pfc. Keith Linville, son of Mrs. Martha Francis, Earling, W. Va., and the late Mr. Linville, were united in marriage in the South Side Church of Christ Saturday evening.

The Rev. Charles Richmond, minister of the church, officiated for the double-ring, candlelight ceremony. Two seven-branched candelabra and a single basket filled with white gladioli, pink and blue Majestic eaisies with pink and blue bows enhanced the altar. An arrangement of pink daisies, fern and white tapers were in each window of the sanctuary. The pews were marked with pink and blue bows.

Mrs. Frank Creamer, organist, and Mrs. Charles Richmond, vocalist, presented a prelude of traditional wedding music. The selection "I Think I've Always Loved You" was sung by Mrs. Richmond while the couple were at the kneeling bench.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white dove-skinned satin with empire waist accented with lace. The long sleeves ended with a wide circular ruffle at the wrists. The A-line skirt had a detachable lace chapel-length train and chapel-lenth veil of silk illusion. She carried a crescent designed arrangement of white daisies, pink miniature carnations, with ivy and baby's breath.

Miss Rebecca Coulter was maid of honor for her sister. Mrs. Daniel McLaughlin and Mrs. Keith Gibson were bridesmatrons. The attendants all wore pale blue, formal length, knit dresses with empire waist, A-line skirts, and cameo neckline trimmed with blue lace. They carried hurricane lamps with pink miniature carnations, pink sweetheart roses, pink and blue baby's breath with light pink velvet ribbon.

The little flower girl, Leah Troute, wore a pink formal length gown with white and pink lace trim and carried a white basket filled with pink and white daisies. She wore pink sweetheart rosebuds with baby's breath in her hair.

Daniel McLaughlin served as best man. The groomsmen were Keith Gibson, Paul Hasselbeck and Phillip Johnson.

Mrs. Coulter chose for her daughter's wedding a peach lace knit formal length gown. She wore a pale green cymbidium orchid corsage. Due to illness the groom's mother was unable to attend. Representing her was Mrs. Leroy Morgan, aunt of the bride, who wore a green knit dress and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Ethel Davidson, grandmother of the bride, wore a blue dress and a white carnation corsage.

Hostesses for the reception in Fellowship Hall at the church were Mrs. Sam Troute, Mrs. John Troute and Mrs. Walter Smithson. Miss Debbie Coulter and Miss Joyce George, cousins of the bride, presided at the guest book. The four-tiered wedding cake, topped with the traditional bride and groom and decorated with pink and blue roses, was made by Mrs. Sam Troute, the bride's cousin.

Pfc. and Mrs. Linville will reside at 467 Peddretti Rd., Cincinnati, following a wedding trip. He is stationed at Fort Knox, Ky. Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter were hosts at a buffet dinner following rehearsal on Friday evening.

Turn beans into casserole

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In these inflationary times when most of us are making do with at least one meatless dinner a week, housewives are turning to the versatile bean.

Virtually every country has its favorite bean dish, from the black bean soup of Cuba to the old-fashioned baked beans of New England, and a number of these specialties fall into the gourmet category.

Next to cereals, the bean is the legume family which contributes most substantially toward feeding the people of the world. With their high protein content, beans are a must in countries where little meat is eaten.

Beans have been with us for a long time. Broad beans, one of the world's oldest cultivated plants, have been found in Bronze Age deposits dating around 3000 B.C. And historians tell us they were grown by the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

On the other side of the world, soybeans were being cultivated, dried and eaten 2,000 years before Christ's birth. And in Latin America, they have apparently been growing beans even longer. Beans remains have been found in caves near Ocampo, Mexico, that date back to about 4000 B.C.

The American Indian taught the Pilgrim fathers the trick of growing corn and beans together and eating them together. They also taught the settlers how to bake dried white beans slowly with a dollop of sweetner to bring out the full flavor.

An old-fashioned cook with the intriguing name Crescent Dragonwagon has written a delightful, informative book on the bean. Titled The Bean Book, it is published by the Workman Publishing Company.

The author, who lives with her cat, Bean Blossom, on a farm in the Ozark Mountains, hails the nutritional value of beans, but adds a note of warning. If you are making them the mainstay of your diet, she says, bear in mind the fact that beans by themselves do not contain complete protein as do meats, eggs and fish.

However, she adds, two incomplete proteins can be combined to make up a meat that has an adequate amount of this vital substance. Thus, she says, dried beans eaten with rice, corn or wheat products like bread or macaroni, or consumed with milk or nuts will make up enough protein.

New England baked beans have been a favorite of mine for years, but only recently I learned a variation that makes them an epicurean dish. The feat is accomplished by adding bourbon whiskey and a few other ingredients. Here is the recipe.

BOURBON BAKED BEANS

4 12-ounce cans baked beans
4 oranges sliced whole
1 lemon sliced whole
1 cup raisins
1 cup molasses
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger or ¼ teaspoon powdered ginger
1 cup Bourbon

Add all ingredients except the bourbon to the 4 cans of beans and place in a large pottery bean casserole. Mix throughly. Add bourbon gradually, making sure it is well blended. Bake in 300 degree oven for one hour to 90 minutes.

IS REAL ESTATE REALLY THE BEST INVESTMENT?

Perhaps your investment inclinations are in the direction of real estate.

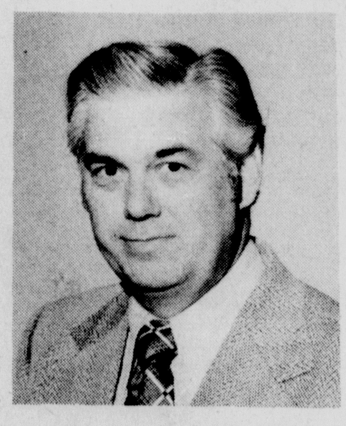

With the nature of our rising economy through the years, plus the growth of population and economic opportunities, the field of real estate investing has, indeed, been a profitable one for those who could afford the risks involved and who are possessed with foresight and aggressiveness.

Investing in real estate is a specialized business, often best left to the informed professionals.

But, if you do invest in real estate, know the risks and disadvantages as well as the benefits.

Get the best possible advice, first, and consult your banker, also.

We wish to congratulate all Junior Fair members for their excellent projects and individual success at the fair this year.

Best Wishes to Dan Lowe on being installed as Master Counselor of the Fayette County Order of DeMolay.

Congratulations to Nelta Baker, Jodi Whittington, and Lynne Rapp for being chosen to reign over the 1973 Fayette County Fair.

At The First National Bank of Washington Court House, we are NOT in the real estate business.

But, we've had a lot of experience in that field, and we do know the many matters that are involved.

Consulting with us will NOT cost you anything, but it could be the best move you've ever made!

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 1

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

A better day for your interests than you may realize. Waste no time getting started, but don't drive through, indifferent to the reactions of others.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

Your innate sympathy for your fellowman could lead you astray now, so take all factors into account if asked for favors — material or otherwise. Curb emotions.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Do not let unexpected situations ruffle you. Study them carefully and, with your innate foresight and ingenuity, you can solve all.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

Your personal ambitions may be dependent on some trends indicated in the day's news. Adjustments are bound to follow.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Ideas and plans for travel may be running into some difficulty — especially if you have planned too much activity or have been too optimistic about costs. There's still time to revise, however.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Indication of some disturbance in job quarters. Stubborn insistence on your own way could further complicate matters. Give a little!

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Influences continue mixed. Some interests seem definitely "off limits," not as colorful as once deemed. Others will progress happily. Keep balance even, attitude thoughtful.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

A shifting of certain situations indicated; perhaps conditions altering. You should be in on the movements, plans. Express your opinions — but discreetly.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

You may trip over little matters if not watchful. Have patience and the "vagueness" or seeming inconsistency of things will clear. Manage tactfully.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

A notable day for presenting new ideas; also old ones carefully treated to get the most good still left in them. Your talents should shine now.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

You may run into some snags, obstacles, but you can handle them — and ably. As with Capricorn, pep up and old idea, keep your vision broad.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Day awaits YOUR move. Study situations carefully. The wrong turn could cause a setback, but the right one could put you well ahead of the crowd.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a lively mind, a dynamic personality, lofty ambitions and great dignity. You are capable of leadership in many fields, but must curb certain traits before you are able to take on such responsibilities, which require self-mastery and discipline. Don't let domineering, excessive pride or impatience cause you to be sharp with others. Leoites make outstanding executives once they have conquered these faults. Otherwise, their value is lessened because they lower the morale of associates and employees. You are ardent, romantically inclined, love to travel and enjoy the luxuries of life — which you are willing to work for.

LSH abuse under probe

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The department of Mental Health and Mental retardation was to pledge its cooperation with the courts to resolve patient abuse complaints at Lima State Hospital today.

The director of the department, Dr. Kenneth Gaver, was to hold a news conference with Atty. Gen. William Brown to explain the department's intention.

"We are proceeding with changes at the hospital, but want to state our intention to cooperate fully with the courts in resolving grievances at Lima. We hope the lawsuit will speed things up," a department spokesman said.

At least 15 residents at Lima State joined in a class action lawsuit against the department.

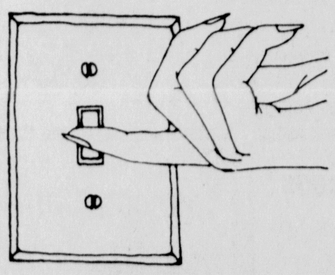

The suit contends patients receive inadequate care and treatment, deprivation of due process of law in commitment procedures and questions of the constitutionality of the law under which persons are sent to the hospital.

Whittington heads in-service program

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— Hugh E. Whittington, superintendent of the Buckeye Local Schools in Ashtabula County, was chosen to head the Ohio Department of Education's program of in-service teacher education Monday.

State Public Instruction Supt. Martin W. Essex said the aim of the program is to bring the latest knowledge, methodology and technology to Ohio's 114,449 teachers.

Ohio Perspective

'Ike the Bike' promotes safety

By LESLIE HEWLETT
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Bicycles aren't supposed to talk, but Ike, the pride of the Cleveland Automobile Club, does.

He tells students in kindergarten through third grade about bicycle safety.

George Tewksbary, safety director of the Cleveland unit of the American Automobile Association created "Ike the Talking Bike," whose voice is a tap recording in his head lamp that is operated by remote control.

"Always ride single file," says Ike to his children. "Ride only one on a bike."

Ike has 15 check points that light up, including horn, head lamp and reflector. "These are some of the safety features a bicycle should have," said Tewksbary.

Ike also tells children to ride with the flow of traffic not against it. "Most parents teach their kids to ride bikes like they walk," said Tewksbary. "That's a major traffic hazard."

There were more than one million bicycle accidents across the nation last year, Tewksbary said.

In 1971, the AAA conducted a survey of 1,723 cities. It showed that 850 persons died in bicycle fatalities that year, 76 per cent up from the previous three years. The survey also showed that three—fourths of the riders involved in the accidents were between the ages of 5 and 14.

In the first five months of this year, Tewksbary said, 21 more died in bicycle accidents in Ohio—three of them in the Greater Cleveland area.

Ignorance of bicycle laws is one problem, but Tewksbary and others in the safety field said the laws themselves aren't uniform.

George Usher, chairman of the Cuyahoga County Uniform Bicycle Code Committee, said representatives from 56 communities have been meeting since last fall in an attempt to unify all the bicycle laws in Cuyahoga County alone.

They seek agreement on nine major points, including the age of a child should be allowed to ride on a street, safety features, bicycle registration and violation penalties.

Ike stresses proper maintenance. "I keep my handle bars and saddle adjusted," says Ike. "I keep my spokes, pedals and chain well oiled. I check my tires, wheels and brakes regularly."

Ike has given about 150 programs since last March. Since his debut, said Tewksbary, seven other communities have asked for an Ike of their own.

Kroger pact faces vote by drivers

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Members of Teamsters Local 100 were to vote today on a tentative contract agreement with the Kroger Co., a union spokesman said.

The union went on strike against Kroger July 22.

Garlan Greer, business agent for Kroger Teamster members, said details of the agreement will be made public after the vote.

No progress was reported Monday in talks between Kroger management and unions representing striking clerks and warehousemen. Jim Connolly, president of Local 1099, Retail Clerks Union, said the 2,300 local Kroger clerks "are still respecting picket lines and will continue to do so."

Despite the continuing strike, William Whiting, company advertising manager, said the 33 area Kroger stores closed July 24 will reopen later this week.

Whiting said the 34 area stores now open will stay open using Kroger administrative personnel, wives and secretaries to man store counters and cash registers.

Each year, as many as 1,400 icebergs break off from glaciers in Greenland's Jacobshaven Fiord and float out to sea.

Top executives show well in pay increases

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There's nothing like a good discussion of somebody else's finances to take your mind off your own. To fuel such a discussion, hoping it remains that and nothing hotter, consider this:

In 1972 there existed a 5.5 per cent guideline for wage increases. In spite of this, the total compensation of chief executives rose about 7.8 per cent, according to a survey by McKinsey & Co., managment consultants.

The survey was conducted among 592 of the largest U.S. corporations in 31 industries. The findings reveal that compensation rose 18.6 per cent in motor vehicles and equipment and 12.8 per cent in railroads.

"Only five industries failed to post increases," McKinsey found, "with meat products alone showing a significant over-all chief executive pay cut—a decrease of 14.3 per cent."

How could such a thing occur, seemingly in violation of guidelines?

The answer lies in the difference between salaries and total compensation, which includes not just the salary but the bonus and incentives and such.

"The fact that executive incentive plans are controlled separately from salaries under existing pay regulations accounts for why over-all executive compensation can increase by the 7.8 per cent that it did, despite a 5.5 per cent wage increase guideline," said George Foote, a McKinsey partner.

A separate analysis of salaries only showed an increase of about 5 per cent from 1971 to 1972, he said, concluding:

"The charge made in some quarters that executives have been lining their pockets at the expense of lower paid employes does not appear to be substantiated by the facts."

And here's another:

If for some reason you had the notion that business hasn't been good, perhaps because the stock market simply doesn't reflect it at all, you should be reminded that seldom in recent history have corporate profits risen so sharply.

Preliminary computations show that after-tax profits of corporations during the April-May-June quarter were about 30 per cent higher than in the same period a year earlier.

In publishing its own survey, First National City Bank commented:

"A rapidly expanding economy and easing of price controls under Phase 3 helped increase earnings at five out of six of the firms covered by the survey."

Here are a few of the aftertax corporate profits reported by Citibank for the first half of 1973 compared with the first half of 1972:

Paper 74 per cent, iron and steel 57, nonferrous metals 51, automobiles and parts 58, chemicals 40, petroleum 46, machinery 35, rubber and plastics 30 and textiles 29 per cent.

Anticipating such increases, Robert Parks, the chief economist for the investment house of Blyth Eastman Dillon commented in a research piece directed at the company's personnel:

"Price violations anyone? The statement ... by the Cost of Living Council that it has found only a few violations of price standards under Phase 3 is astonishing to us on a number of accounts."

He proceeded to list some of them, the first of which was:

"It runs counter to the overall data for several industries, which show rapid price rises, wholesale and retail, in the first half of this year, a large climb in total profits, and a significant rise in profit margins ... "

Many of the profit margins, he argued, rose above the average of the best two of the past four or five fiscal years," which suggested to him that more profit violations could be found than were turned up by the council.

Women's Lib brings Dutch dates

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

Women who once reached for their lipstick while their dates paid the restaurant bill might be as likely to reach for their money these days.

Not so long ago, the rule was clear: the man invited the woman and paid the way, especially in the initial dating stages.

But now dating is becoming more casual, and so are paying habits. Singles are inching their way toward a greater sharing of financial responsibilities.

The women's liberation movement, the questioning of traditional social structures that began in the 1960s and the rising cost of an evening on the town have made the difference, say men and women from New York City to Berkeley, Calif.

"Men used to accept cash under the table. Now, I just go up and pay the bill. They aren't reluctant about it. It's incredible how fast things have changed. In the last 10 years, they've turned upside down," said Kent Juhan, a slender, dark-haired receptionist in an architectural firm in Berkeley.

Women's liberation has brought some women to feel that they want equality all the way.

"Up until about two years ago, I never paid for anything. But I'm paying my share more often. I just like being more independent. By paying occasionally, I have more say about what we do," said Ellen Dayton, 30, who makes about $13,000 working for the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C.

Some men agree; others don't. But in most cases, there is no set rule and a thorny question can arise: Should the woman offer to pay or should the man hint for help?

New York banker David Smith, 31, suggests that women feel they're expected to chip in, liberated or not.

"There's a social pressure for a woman to assert herself and be independent. And there are probably a lot of men who communicate to their dates that they should pay their way because it's now expected," said Smith.

Other men contend that, because women are earning better salaries today, they should be willing to chip in.

Cost is a strong factor, especially the increasingly popular weekend date.

"I like to spend money on a woman. I like the male role, but when it gets to a $150 plane fare, it's a different story," says Charles Markarian of the days he used to pay the entire tab for a skiing weekend. Markarian, 30, is a garment manufacturer in Bergenfield, N.J.

Some men also complain that some women talk plenty about liberation but are strangely silent when the check arrives.

"Some women act as if Queen Victoria is alive and well. They'll be damned if they'll put any money on the table," says Sandy Bierce, a 26-year-old New York Stock broker.

Dayton man injured in rural collision

A passenger was injured in one of three traffic accidents investigated Monday by police and sheriff's officers.

Robert S. Long, 19, Dayton, was injured when a car in which he was riding collided with a semi-truck at 1:20 p.m. Monday at the intersection of U.S. 35 and Edgefield-Garringer Road, the Sheriff's Department said.

The car, driven by Daniel P. Long, 23, Dayton, was a total loss. It was eastbound on U.S. 35 and the truck, driven by Albert A. Wilson, 55, Jeffersonville, Ind., was westbound, sheriff's officers said. The truck turned left on Edgefield-Garringer Road and into the path of the car.

A travel trailer being towed by a van overturned at 1:20 p.m. Monday on I-71, 400 feet northeast of the Brock Road overpass.

The driver of the van was Janet Lou Carlton, 36, Painesville. The sheriff's department reported that the trailer began swaying from side to side on the road, then turned over in the parking lane. The cause was not apparent.

The trailer hitch was bent and the trailer was damaged on its right side and the inside.

A seven-by-eight-foot plate glass window was shattered at the R.C. Belt Co. at 1:50 p.m. Monday when a car backed into the corner of the building.

Police said a car driven by Steven E. Mitchell, 16, New Vienna, backed into the building, breaking the window and damaging the frame.

Burglars get little for their trouble

Burglars came away empty-handed in four break-ins investigated by police and sheriff's departments the last two nights. The theft of a box of tools from a truck was also reported.

The tools were taken from a wrecker parked in front of the Marvin Fredricks residence, 647 Harrison St., between 1 p.m. Sunday and 11:46 p.m. Monday.

Burglars tried to pry open vending machines at the Ashland Oil station at the corner of Highland Avenue and Elm Street Sunday night or Monday morning but were unsuccessful. Entry to the station was gained by removing glass from a window on the south side of the station.

The same night, someone tried to pry open a door on the east side of the Belle-Aire Beverage Center, 750 W. Elm St., but was unable to do so. The attempted break-in occurred between 12:34 a.m. and 3:55 a.m. Monday.

Another break-in attempt, this one at the Midland Grocery Co., 153 S. Main St., was also unsuccessful. It occurred Monday night.

Basic Construction Materials, Old Chillicothe Road, was hit by burglars sometime Monday night or Tuesday morning, but nothing was missing. A doorknob leading into the office was twisted in the unsuccessful attempt.

Colombia topic at Kiwanis Club's meeting

Mrs. Larry Loyd spoke at the Kiwanis Club meeting Monday evening, presenting a program of slides and commentaries on her home country, Colombia, in South America.

Following the presentation at the Lafayette Inn President Gerald Wheat called attention to the annual ice cream and cake social to be held on the Courthouse lawn, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday. He thanked members who worked at the gates of the Fair and presented a Distinguished Service Award to President-elect George Gibbs for supervising the project.

In her program, Mrs. Loyd pointed out that Colombia is about half jungle and half mountains. She said that the population is concentrated in the mountain areas to escape the intense heat of the lower land.

Principal products of the country are coffee, emeralds, cattle, petroleum and textiles.

Mrs. Loyd touched on the history of Colombia saying that it was originally a Spanish colony. In 1819, she said, Simon Bolivar is credited with overthrowing the Spanish rule in South America, thus giving Colombia the opportunity to establish a republic.

Press curbs surround plot trial

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Tight security and tough press restrictions surrounded the opening today of the trial of eight antiwar activists on conspiracy charges.

The seven members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War and a sympathizer are accused of plotting to disrupt the 1972 Republican National Convention at Miami Beach, Fla.

U.S. District Court Judge Winston Arnow said only a pool of five newsmen would be permitted in the courtroom.

Twenty-five federal marshals, assisted by General Services Administration police, were assigned to guard duty and to operate metal detectors and television cameras to screen spectators and newsmen.

In a pretrial hearing Monday, Arnow refused to lift restrictions on who could enter the courtroom and reduced the number of newsmen allowed inside from 25 to five. He said the space was needed for prospective jurors expected to total more than 80.

Defendants in the trial are Scott Camil, 27, Stanley K. Michelson Jr., 23, and John Briggs, 25, of Gainesville; Peter J. Mahoney, 23, of New York City; Alton C. Foss, 25, of Hialeah, Fla.; John Kniffen, 25, and William J. Patterson, 24, of Austin, Tex.; and Donald V. Perdue, 23, of Hollywood, Fla.

Artificial heart poses problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long quest to construct an implantable artificial heart, drawing steadily closer to realization, raises a disturbing number of questions, a panel of scientists has warned the government.

Some of the moral, ethical, legal and social questions have the potential for emotioncharged controversy. The scientists said these issues should be resolved before the artificial organ is made available to the estimated 50,000 people whose lives it might save each year.

An advance copy of the National Heart and Lung Institute report, which will be published in two months, was obtained by The Associated Press.

The NHLI is spending about $5.7 million this year on artificial heart and related research and has put at least $36 million into the project since its inception. The Atomic Energy Commission is spending $2.2 million this year and has spent a total of more than $9 million since 1967.

A totally implantable artificial heart is now being tested in animals. The report said it might be as much as 10 years before such a device is generally available to the public, but limited human experimentation may be much closer.

"We believe that development of the totally implantable artificial heart should proceed," the 10 lawyers, doctors, sociologists, ethicists and political scientists said.

But they listed a series of issues that must be resolved that included:

—Cost. At $25,000 per patient, the artificial heart will strain current health care financial systems. Unless financial support is made available to all who need the artificial organ, it may become a life-saving device accessible only to the rich.

—Selection of recipients. Once the organ becomes clinically available, it is unlikely there will be sufficient hearts, implantation teams or medical centers immediately to accommodate everyone who would die otherwise. Selection should be made on a medical basis only, resorting to lottery in case of shortages for patients with equally dire medical situations. In no case, the panel urged, should patients be selected on the basis of "social worth."

—The definition of death. How will doctors determine the point of death for persons with a mechanical pump that can continue circulating blood after other organs have died, the panel asked. Doctors and lawmakers should begin now to resolve the legal questions, the report said.

In Fayette County

Social Security payments total $457,000 monthly

Social Security benefits were being paid to residents of Fayette county at a rate of $457,000 a month at the close of 1972, Harry B. Bieber, Social Security manager at Chillicothe, reports.

Of the Social Security beneficiaries living in Fayette County, 2,326 are retired workers and their dependents. Another 783 are receiving benefits as the survivors of workers who have died, and 371 are getting benefits as disabled workers or their dependents.

Bieber pointed out that although most Social Security beneficiaries are older people, about one out of every four is under age 60. In Fayette county, 729 people under age 60 are collecting Social Security payments each month.

Nearly 400 are under age 18, receiving payments because a working father or mother has died or is getting Social Security disability or retirement benefits.

Most of the 57 beneficiaries in Fayette County between 18 and 22 years of age, are getting student's benefits under a provision in the Social Security law permitting the continuation of a child's benefits beyond his 18th birthday, and up to age 22, if the child is attending school full time.

ALSO in this 18-22 age group, Bieber said, are some other types of beneficiaries, illustrating the broad family protection that the Social Security program provides workers of all ages.

Some are children of retired, disabled, or deceased workers who became disabled before they reached 22 and who will probably never be able to work and become self-supporting.

The monthly benefits of these young people, handicapped by physical or mental disabilities, will continue indefinitely. Benefits are also payable to the mother if the disabled son or daughter is in the mother's care.

Bieber added that another relatively small but significant group of youthful Social Security beneficiaries are those who are receiving benefits as disabled workers.

Newark mayor fires officers on 'sick' call

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Mayor Richard Baker fired some of the city's 68 patrolmen Monday after they failed to report to work, rather calling in sick.

The "Blue Flu" epidemic was a protest over wages and benefits, a union spokesman said.

In the meantime, some of the 62 firefighters also reported sick. Firemen were not fired by the Mayor.

Baker said he invoked the Ferguson Act which bars strikes by public employes in critical jobs. He said the continued absence by the policemen was a strike.

City administrators have not released the number of employes fired.

The two civil servant groups joined forces to demand a $1,837.50 per person pay raise over the next two years. In addition, they asked for a boost in their clothing allowance.

An attorney for a newlyformed coalition of police and firemen said the job action was only a strike in the mayor's eyes.

"The boys are on sick call, and they're going to stay out. If the mayor wants to hire 60 policemen and 60 firemen, then that's what's he's going to have to do," said attorney Virginia Weiss.

"The department is running as normal with men held over from the preceding shift and the men that did come in," said Fire Chief Eugene Malloy.

The job action began Sunday morning.

Tax probe turned down

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's tax administration board has refused to investigate property taxes on President Nixon's estate at San Clemente.

The State Board of Equalization rejected a proposal by Chairman William M. Bennett Monday that it determine whether the owners of the Western White House property are paying their fair share of taxes.

Bennett called for the state probe on the basis of reports that the 29-acre complex in Orange County is assessed at $1.37 million this year, while the original sale price and reported improvements total $2.33 million.

The Orange County Register reported this month that the estate, owned by Nixon and industrialist Robert Abplanalp, has been undertaxed by $25,000 to $55,000 over the past three years. Orange County officials denied the allegation.

Bennett said he would pursue the issue at next month's board meeting unless Orange County officials take some action.

Switzerland had an estimated 20,000 major snowslides in its 1969-70 winter season.

Bibby blanks A's with no-hit gem

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Things are looking up now," said Jim Bibby. The Texas Rangers' pitcher couldn't have been any more "up" against Oakland.

He had his fastball up, down and everywhere else—within the strike zone, that is—and had the world champion A's flailing away helplessly.

And when the flailing ended Monday night, Bibby had 13 strikeouts—and a no-hitter!

Not only was Bibby up. So was his salary. Rangers' owner Bob Short, in a moment of exuberance that seemingly ignored baseball's dictum barring performance bonuses, gave the 28- year-old right-hander a $5,000 raise...not bad considering Bibby had a contract with the big league minimum of $15,000 on the bottom line.

Oakland's Vida Blue, a strikeout artist in his own right and an expert in the no-hit department, was on the short end of the Rangers' 6-0 triumph. He was the victim of Jeff Burroughs' grand-slam home run and Bill Sudakis' solo blast, both in the first inning.

Getting a no-hitter is new to Bibby—but getting close isn't. He's thrown a one-hitter, a two-hitter and a pair of four-hitters since coming to the Rangers in a June 6 trade with the National League's St. Louis Cardinals.

In the rest of the American League, the Chicago White Sox belted the Minnesota Twins 9-1, the Boston Red Sox edged the New York Yankees 4-3 and the Detroit Tigers held off the Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

White Sox 9, Twins 1

Jim Kaat entered the game at Minnesota's Metropolitan Stadium with a 29-10 lifetime record against Chicago. Now it's 29-11.

The White Sox sent Kaat to the showers with a four-run sixth as Pat Kelly walked, Jerry Hairston tripled, Bill Melton singled and Buddy Bradford tripled.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Jim Ray Hart's ninth homer of the baseball season, a two-out shot in the top of the ninth, averted a defeat for the Yankees—but only temporarily. In the bottom of the ninth, Rico Petrocelli, who had hit a two-run homer earlier, led off against New York's ace reliever, Sparky Lyle, with a single, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on a grounder and came home on Rock Miller's single, giving the Red Sox a 4-3 victory.

Tigers 4, Orioles 3

John Hiller saved Detroit's 4- 3 victory with a "pitch that never got there."

Three annual city tourneys scheduled

Three annual city recreation program tournaments have been scheduled this weekend, according to recreation director Chuck Wallace.

Wallace said there will be a $2 entry fee for adults in all three of the tournaments. The junior division is for youths ages 17 and under.

The third annual city horseshoe tournament will begin at 6:45 p.m. Friday at Eyman Park. The tourney, which will offer first and second place trophies in two divisions, is rescheduled from last Saturday when rain forced postponement.

Bob Rodgers is the defending champion in the mens division and David Garringer won last year's junior division. The tourney will be conducted on a 50-throw, count all basis.

ON SATURDAY, the annual archery tournament will open with two classes in the men's division plus women's and junior divisions. There will be trophies for first and second place finishers in all divisions.

The men's division will have open and bare shooting classes. Donny Osborne is the defending champ in the open class and this will be the first year for competition in the bare class. Joyce Benson is the women's defending champ. Both boys and girls will be able to compete in the junior division.

Registration for the third annual city tennis tournament must be completed before Friday by contacting Wallace at 335-2012. There will be both men's and women's singled in addition to a doubles tourney. Trophies will be awarded for first and second place.

Wallace said the first round tennis matches must be played by Sunday.

O.J. Simpson shows optimism

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

O.J. Simpson, recently recovered from a viral infection, now has a case of early season optimism.

"I'm optimistic about the coming season," said the Buffalo Bills' star running back, "but of course you're always optimistic at this point."

But Simpson, who has suffered through four losing seasons in Buffalo since bringing his football talents east from the University of Southern California, does have reason to think the Bills' football fortunes are on the upswing.

"I think I can rush for a lot more yards this season than last," said Simpson, the NFL's leading rusher in 1972 with 1,-251 yards and six touchdowns. "With guys like Reggie McKenzie, Donnie Green and Dave Foley (members of the Buffalo offensive line) up there, it's going to open things up."

Monday Simpson traded his hospital uniform for a football uniform and suited up for a full practice session.

The Oakland Raiders held their annual training camp Family Day over the weekend and became one big happy family Monday after the arrival of tackle Bob Brown and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff.

Brown reported to camp Sunday night . Biletnikoff, leading receiver in the AFC last season with 58 receptions, reported Friday after threatening to hold out for more money.

In the only trade of the day, the Denver Broncos sent wide receiver Matt Maslowski, a 6-foot-2, 210-pound second-year man out of the University of San Diego, to the Minnesota Vikings for an undisclosed amount of cash.

The San Francisco 49ers lost a tight end but gained a wide receiver when they moved veteran Dick Witcher back to his old starting job.

Coach Dick Nolan was forced to switch Witcher, who was the backup for tight end Ted Kwalick last year, to wide receiver after losing three players at that position to preseason injuries.

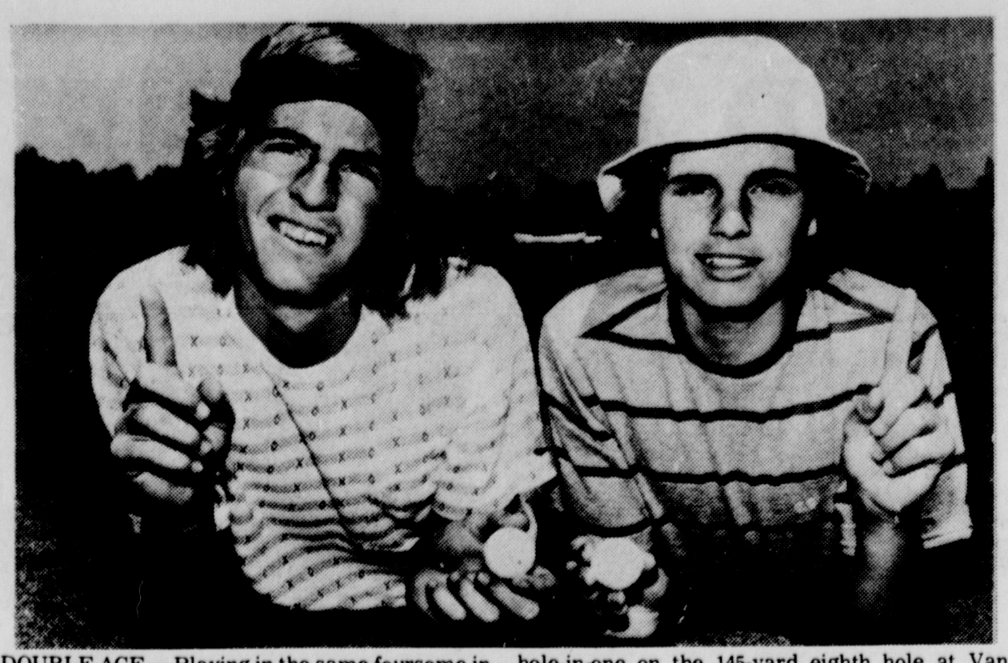

Meanwhile, Coach Harland Svare of the San Diego Chargers said he may spare quarterback Johnny Unitas, 40, obtained from Baltimore in the off season, from the onslaught of opposing defenses in preseason games.

"I want him there in September," said Svare. "If there's any question about his physical condition for Saturday night (when the Chargers meet the New York Giants), he won't go." After playing with the College All-Stars, two-time AllAmerican Rich Glover from Nebraska, made his debut in the New York Giants camp.

"The Giants' defense with a middle guard is just right for me," said the 6-1, 242-pounder. "Sure, I have a tough job in front of me, trying to beat out John Mendenhall. He has experience over me, but I feel just as soon as I get everything down I'll have a good chance."

Minnesota Vikings' defensive back Karl Kassulke made some improvement but remained in critical condition, a spokesman at Methodist Hospital in suburban St. Louis Park said.

The spokesman said Kassulke, 32, who was injured in a car-motorcycle collision last Tuesday, was taken off a respirator for a trial period and doctors said he appeared to be breathing satisfactorily.

Bengals tailored as opener looms

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP)— This is the week Cincinnati Bengals Coach Paul Brown dwells on "tailoring" his football team—an alteration designed to find the best fit for a strongest suit.

"We'll be doing the little things, just tailoring the offense and defense," said Brown as the Bengals move toward their Saturday night season opener against Super Bowl Champion Miami.

"We have to adapt to the personnel and style of defenses we expect. But mostly it's fundamentals," said the 64-year-old Brown, who is entering his 39th season of coaching.

"We face a confident club with a lot of ability. Miami is doing what we're doing—putting the offense in—and I think that showed the other night against the College All-Stars. I don't think the Dolphins were taking the game too seriously," said Brown.

With the roster currently at 60 players, Brown said he expects a couple of more cuts this week. The two-a-day drills have been cut down to one as the opener looms.

Brown said the importance of establishing a winning spirit "can not be overlooked" during exhibition play.

"But we want to find out what the newcomers can do. Of course we'll try to do both— with and use new players—if we can," he said.

Brown has tabbed third-year quarterback Ken Anderson as starting quarterback against Miami.

"He's progressing well and will get a lot more things done this year. But he's typical third-year quarterback. There are no shortcuts to gaining experience as a quarterback. It's a never-ending trial. It all takes time," he said.

"We're still in the process of building our offense and defense.

"The Dolphins carry out both very well. They don't make mistakes," he said.

Estabrook impresses Paul Brown

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Cincinnati Bengal Coach Paul Brown said Monday he is impressed with the play of rookie quarterback Wayne Estabrook.

Estabrook last year was named college division player of the year for Southern California while playing for Whittier College.

"He shows pretty darned good poise when he gets in there behind the team," Brown said. "He has football savvy."

"Furthermore, he's realistic enough to accept the role he has to play. He knows he can't just step right in, that he has so much to learn. He keeps charts of our play calls and completions during practice, then he gets to run the club the last few plays. We like Wayne very much."

Brown said he plans to use Estabrook behind Ken Anderson and Virgil Carter, his other quarterbacks. Anderson will start Saturday as the Bengals challenge the World Champion Miami Dolphins.

Brown said that rookie wide receiver Isaac Curtis, the Bengals' first-round draft choice, pulled a hamstring muscle in Monday's practice and will miss the Miami game.

The Bengals announced their third cut of summer practice Monday, rookie defensive back Hurles Scales from North Texas State. He was the Bengals' 14th round draft choice.

Willis, Girtons bid for BR title tonight

The stage is set for a show of strength between the defending champion Girtons and Willis Insurance in the crowded Fayette County Babe Ruth League championship race.

Willis Insurance and Girtons will collide for the league championship at 5 p.m. tonight at Roszmann Field. The teams will be matching identical 10-4 records in tonight's showdown.

WILLIS INSURANCE, coached by Jeff Blake and Steve Ross, earned a berth opposite Girtons in tonight's struggle by posting an 11-2 win over Jeffersonville on the Jeff diamond.

The loss was the fifth in 13 outings for coach Lawrence Smith's Jeffersonville team, which had been involved in the championship race throughout the season.

Mark Lamberson scattered seven hits in picking up his fifth win in seven outings for Willis Insurance. Lamberson fanned 13 batters and allowed only one extra-base hit.

Rex Coe cracked out three hits in five trips to spark a nine-hit attack for Willis, while Doug Maddux went two-for-four and scored three runs. Losing pitcher Tyree paced Jeffersonville with three hits and Sizemore clouted a double.

Eddie Deweese, Bob Wilson and Coe turned in fine defensive efforts for the winners and David Stackhouse made a fine catch to halt a Jeffersonville rally.

SABINA emerged as the champion in the Babe Ruth Minor league tournament by chalking up a 13-5 win over Girtons Saturday. The win was Sabina's 14th straight this season.

A solid 18-hit offensive show guided Sabina to its win in the tourney finale. Greg Hill and Dean Haley had three hits apiece while Bart Barter, Brett Everman, Ron Warnock and Kevin Dunn all had two hits.

Hill was credited with the win for Sabina after receiving help from Barber while Shane Riley was tagged with the setback.

Commissioner John Skinner said the Fayette County Babe Ruth All-Star tournament is scheduled to open Friday at Roszmann Field.

MT's ticket sale Aug. 13

Season reserved tickets for the 1973 Miami Trace football campaign can be purchased starting Aug. 13, according to Glenn Marchal, new faculty manager.

Marchal said that persons who held reserved season tickets a year ago can purchase this year's ducats Aug. 13-17 between 4 and 7 p.m. at the high school. Reserved tickets will be offered to the general public Aug. 20-24 between 4 and 7 p.m. at the high school.

Season reserved seats will also be offered at Miami Trace's annual meet the team night.

American clinic aids in Turkey

By EMEL ANIL

TALAS, Turkey (AP) — "In the village of Kurukipru there was a woman in a cave, paralyzed from her waist down by Potts disease. For a year and a half she had not moved from the cave. Now she was eight months pregnant and had pneumonia. She is with the animals, two donkeys, five goats and nine sheep. Her husband sleeps upstairs in a room."

The woman was a typical patient of the American doctors at a missionary clinic here, the last of what was once a network of 12 medical establishments around Turkey.

Talas is a village five miles from the town of Kayseri in the center of the Anatolian plateau.

For close to a century, American doctors and nurses of the clinic have lived with similar scenes, treating an average of 7,000 patients a year. When Dr. William Dodd started the clinic in 1886, there was no other medical establishment within 100 miles.

NOW with state hospitals and over a hundred private doctors in Kayseri, the peasants still travel for hours on donkeys, old, beat-up trucks, or just walk to reach the clinic.

The present American doctor is Pittsburgh-born William Matthews, 42, of Winter Park, Fla. Unlike this predecessors, he is not allowed to make calls to surrounding villages because of a government ruling. He believes this ban has detracted from the spirit of the work.

The earlier doctors, who left behind journals and log notes, skied, rode horseback or used jeeps to reach patients in remote villages who were too ill to be moved.

The American staff at present consists of Dr. Matthews and two nurses — his wife, Marguerite, and veteran missionary Isabel Hemingway, cousin of novelist Ernest Hemingway. They are aided by a Turkish lab technician and some clerks and nurse's aides.

DR. MATTHEWS said the nature of the diseases has changed over the years. Instead of cases of cholera and other epidemic diseases which were rampant in the past, the clinic now handles mainly chronic illnesses.

As missionaries the doctors at the clinic have always concerned themselves with social problems. This attitude led to some sort of specialization in fertility work. Miss Hemingway said, "We realized that childlessness in the families usually led to the acquistion of a second wife or total disintegration of the family."

In the last decade family planning has started to work both ways, with the clinic advocating birth control.

Matthews says the birth control program has not been very successful. Despite a high population growth rate — nearly 3 per cent — the Turkish government has dragged its feet on birth control, fearing political backlash from the devout Moslem peasantry.

THE CLINIC, over the years, found its biggest competition from practitioners of folk medicine. Advised by the witch doctors in their villages, peasants have come to the clinic as a last resort after such "cures" as drinking rooster sperm for infertility, driving hot spikes through their legs for rheumatism, putting chewing gum on hernias and dog feces on diabetic ulcers, drinking gasoline to get rid of worms, or swallowin g worms so they will eat growths in the body.

The clinic charges patient $1.50 for a full examination. Poor patients are charged half and the poorest are taken care of free. Even with bargain-basement prices, the clinic is self-supporting except for the doctor's salary, which comes out of funds provided by the American Board Mission in New York.

The Talas Clinic, faced with difficulty in finding American doctor missionaries and construction of a new hospital-medical school a few miles outside Kayseri, will probably close soon, Matthews said.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North

Pass	6 ♥

Opening lead - ten of clubs.

Let's assume you're in six hearts and West leads a club. The object is to make 12 tricks without seeing the adverse cards, though you know from the bidding that East surely has the king of spades and that relying on a spade finesse will lead to disaster.

The situation you face is by no means uncommon. The problem is to find a way of playing the hand so as to avoid the luck element ordinarily associated with a finesse.

In the present case you start with the knowledge that East has the A-K of clubs, and actually this is all you need to know to assure yourself of a happy ending.

Let's assume you cover the ten of clubs with the jack and draw two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. Then, with malice aforethought, you ruff a club, re-enter dummy with a diamond, and ruff the third round of clubs.

Next you cash the ace of diamonds, ruff a diamond, and as a result of your machinations this is now the position:

When you lead the queen of clubs and discard a spade on it, East wins it with the ace and finds himself at the end of his rope. He is well and truly endplayed. Your generosity in conceding a club trick that you obviously could have prevented him from making pays excellent dividends.

Treatment of Detached Retina

Can you tell me something about the condition called "detached retina of the eye"?

My uncle has had two attacks. Is there any way to prevent it or permanently cure it?

Miss T. O., Pa.

Dear Miss O.:

Detachment of the retina is one of the most difficult problems that comes to the attention of the eye specialist.

The retina is a fine, delicate membrane that lines the back of the eye. All images are concentrated on this remarkable structure which plays a vital role in the process of vision.

The retina can be compared to the sensitized film in the back of a camera.

Special rods and cones within the retina account for the finest differentiations of color.

A hole in the retina and the separation of the retina from its normal position causes sudden impairment of vision.

There was a time, not many years ago, when this very serious complication was viewed with tremendous anxiety by eye specialists.

Today, there are a number of highly refined techniques that can repair the hole in the retina and return the detached retina to its normal position.

One of the newest methods is the use of the LASER beam (Light Amplification Stimulated by Emission of Radiation) for detachment of the retina. It is probably the most intense light that has been created by man.

It can be painlessly used, without surgery, to penetrate and coagulate the rip in the retina.

Many other exciting techniques are being studied, refined, and devised by dedicated researchers working at the Retina Foundation in Boston.

It is hoped that the present activity here and in other institutions in America and abroad will eventually bring to light better ways of preventing these retinal tears.

Is there still any valid reason why I should not have been allowed to have my 6 and 8 year old children visit me while I was in the hospital?

I found that I missed them terribly and I really believe that their concern about me would have been relieved if they had come to see me.

Mrs. J. H., Maine

Dear Mrs. H.:

There are very sound reasons why children are not permitted to visit in hospitals.

The chances of cross-contamination (by germs) are greater with youngsters than in adults.

There is, of course, the additional factor that children become restless and may interfere with normal and especially unusual situations that can and do occur in hospitals.

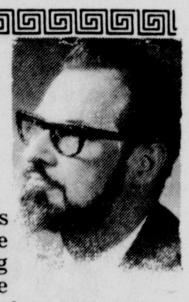

A number of hospitals are experimenting with limited visits by children in order to reduce the separation anxiety you speak of.

It has occurred to me that closed-circuit television would allow children to see and speak to their hospitalized parent from a central waiting room in the hospital.

During the last Ice Age, which reached its greatest advance about 18,000 years ago, ice sheets covered nearly 30 per cent of the earth's land surface.

For many years now, people have dreamed of shooting their own home sound movies. Several companies have come out with "Rube Goldberg" systems that left much to be desired. One, I remember, used a cassette tape and worked like something designed by the federal government. The systems that worked well were out of sight, pricewise. That was the story 'til now.

The KODAK EKTASOUND Movie Cameras, the 130 and the 140 are going to change all that. You'll be getting a lot of promotional stuff on the new system, you know, the kind of stuff written for the num-nums. Actually the thing seems to be pretty well engineered and the price can be kept low through mass-production techniques. Until the government requires the manufacturer to add "safety" and "anti-pollution" devices to the camera and projector, the price will be within the budget of most of us.

There are two models of the KODAK EKTASOUND Movie Projectors too. One lets you add music, sound effects or comment to the "lip-sync" sound you made when the film was shot. If you want to know more about super 8 sound movies, come in. We will soon have a unit set up, and until then we can give you the dope on the new stuff.

Heavy rains drenched an area northwest of Lubbock, Tex., with over an inch in an hour.

Thunderstorms in northeast Texas and northwest Louisiana produced gusty winds, some small hail and heavy rain. Longview, Tex., was hit by nearly 2 inches of heavy rain.

Temperatures before dawn ranged from 50 at Fargo, N.D., to 92 at Needles, Calif.

Community Education panel hears progress reports

Reports concerning funds and the progress of committees were heard at a meeting of the Community Education Advisory Council Tuesday night. The meeting was held in the Washington C. H. Area Chamber of Commerce offices.

Kaye Bartlett, co-chairman, presented the letter of application to be submitted to the Mott Foundation for a grant to help finance the program here. Dr. Sam Lucas, regional co-ordinator for the Institute for Community Education Development at Ball State, is in charge of processing the applications. Dr. Lucas recently visited Washington C. H. to assist the council in planning the Community Education Program.

John Gruber, program chairman, reported on the work of his committee to incorporate all facets of the community on the council. The council will be composed of 45 members on a rotating basis.

Mrs. Robert Lee, publicity committee member, outlined plans proposed by committee members and asked for comments or suggestions.

Don Riber attended the meeting and reported how the Ohio Arts Council might be a possible source of funding. Bartlett urged that members interested in the fine arts be invited to attend the Community Education meeting.

DERAILMENT — Baltimore and Ohio Railroad workmen are shown repairing rails damaged about 2:15 p.m. Monday near the Fayette County Airport when six cars and the caboose of a B&O freight train jumped the tracks. Four of the derailed cars were loaded; three with plastic materials and the other with scrap materials. None of the cars overturned. The 35-car train was bound for Cincinnati from Newark. The cause of the derailment is uncertain. F. L. Ricketts and John Trimble, both of Newark, were the train's engineer and conductor.

Delta jet crashes; fear 85 are dead

BOSTON (AP) — A Delta Airlines DC9 jet carrying 90 persons aboard crashed and disintegrated on landing at Logan International Airport in heavy fog today. Police said it had reports 85 persons died.

Only two survivors were reported initially by Massachusetts General Hospital.

An eyewitness said the twin-engine plane crashed on a runway about 1,000 feet from the edge of the water at the busy airport that juts into Boston Harbor.

State police said it appeared that the jet struck a seawall at the approach to the airport. A state police spokesman said there was a break in the 2½-foot high wall, indicating the craft's landing gear had struck it.

An observer said personal effects and parts of bodies were strewn all over the runway.

He said the plane, arriving on a flight from Burlington, Vt., seemed to have disintegrated on impact.

He said the largest portion of the plane he could see was a 10-foot portion of the fusilage.

State police said a temporary morgue was set up at the airport fire station at the airport.

Reports from the scene said numerous vehicles drove to the crash site to collect bodies from the debris and mud. Some of the vehicles became mired in the mud.

Campaign bill's future uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) — An uncertain future lies ahead in the House for a Watergate spawned campaign reform bill passed by the Senate.

The bill, intended to curb "big-money influence" in elections, would sharply limit campaign contributions and campaign spending and establish an independent enforcement agency.

While the Senate was passing the bill 82-to-8 Monday, the House balked at even considering a bill to open the way for congressional pay raises in this non-election year.

The vote in the House was 237 to 156 against taking up the pay bill which the Senate passed July 9 with no debate or roll call vote.

So far the House has shown scant interest in the type of campaign financing legislation passed by the Senate. Some senators suggested it had been made so restrictive that it is unlikely to survive in the House.

Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, chairman of the House Republican Conference, praised some features of the bill but said it may do more to re-elect incumbents than to reform campaigns.

But Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said the bill's controls on campaign spending were "a direct response to the Watergate scandal." In that respect, he said, the measure "represents silver lining in the black cloud of Watergate."

Campaign spending for congressional and presidential candidates would be limited to 10 cents for each voting age person in primaries and 15 cents in general elections.

In the case of presidential candidates, on the basis of the latest population figures, this would set a limit of $13.9 million in primaries and $20.8 million in general elections.

The amount Senate candidates could spend in general election campaigns would range up to slightly more than $2 million in California. A minimum of $175,000 would be allowed in the least populous states.

Individuals could contribute no more than $3,000 to a candidate for federal office for each of his campaigns in a primary, general election or runoff. The same limit would apply to political committees.

In addition, a ceiling of $25,000 would be placed on an individual's total contributions in a year to all candidates for federal office and no cash contributions in excess of $50 would be permitted.

A bipartisan, 7-member commission would be established to enforce the legislation and the campaign financing reports required by legislation passed in 1971.

All the members of the Senate Watergate committee voted for the bill except for Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., the vice chairman. He voted present after saying the legislation was premature until the committee had concluded its probe.

The Senate passed by voice vote a bill recommended by President Nixon providing for a 16-member commission to make a sweeping study of election laws and the whole electoral process.

The commission would be required to submit its recommendations within a year.

Cambodian bombing secrecy 'explained'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon clamped tight secrecy on U.S. bombing of Cambodia when he ordered the action in March 1969, says Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The same secret procedures were used in 1970 to hide B52 raids in Northern Laos, Wheeler told the Senate Armed Services Committee Monday.

Bombing raids against enemy sanctuaries in neutralist Cambodia were approved at the request of U.S. commanders after a month of deliberations by President Nixon and Melvin R. Laird, who was then secretary of defense, Wheeler said.

The President repeatedly directed that the operation be cloaked in maximum security for diplomatic reasons, Wheeler said.

The military devised dual reporting systems, he said. One supplied accurate information to a few persons with a "need to know" and the other supplied false information through normal channels identifying targets in South Vietnam. The latter wound up in the Pentagon's computer files.

Wheeler said there was no intent to deceive those in authority, although erroneous information failing to account for the strikes in Cambodia was given to the Senate Armed Services Committee in 1971 and this year.

The Pentagon confirmed 3,630 B52 sorties into Cambodia from March 1969 to May 1970, after the testimony of former Air Force Maj. Hal Knight that he was ordered to burn records of the secret strikes and substitute false reports.

Wheeler, who retired in June 1970, said that from February 1970 to May 23, 1970, 149 B52 bombing sorties in Northern Laos were identified under the dual reporting system as being in Southern Laos.

He defended the bombing raids as wise from a military standpoint, saying they halved American casualties in Vietnam, which had been 250 a week.

He said Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia knew about the raids and "made no complaint."

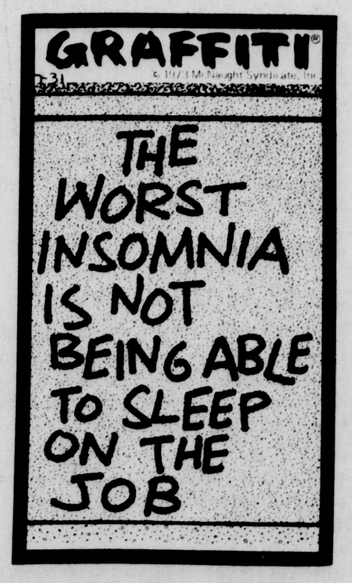

Wheeler said he understood Sihanouk had acquiesced, but had to deal with North Vietnam and China and didn't want to acknowledge to his own people that the United States was bombing Cambodian soil with his permission.

Farm bill again faces veto threat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional conferees, heading to a sixth session on the farm bill today, face a renewed threat of a presidential veto.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said Monday he would recommend a veto unless the final version is in line with a tight budget and a "full-production" national agricultural policy.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., a conferee and chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said he doesn't know if Butz is bluffing.

Butz "is in the position where he has to give us his asking price rather than his selling price, and I don't believe the conferees are going to make any further concessions," Poage said.

A deadlock over a provision to ban food stamps for most strikers could force the House members of the Senate-House conference committee to go back for instructions from the House on what to do, congressmen said.

Eventual maneuvering might open a way for farm program reformers, who have lost in conference what they had won on the floor, to try forcing their views onto the conferees, they said.

The House itself is bitterly split over the food stamp section. The provision on strikers was accepted by the House 213 to 203, upheld by 210 to 207 and survived final challenge 208 to 207. There is no such ban in the Senate bill.

Meanwhile, Butz said Monday he would urge a veto if the final bill contains a four-year increase of five per cent in minimum milk price supports. Another unacceptable provision, he said, would be more than one year of cost-of-production escalation for the "target prices" being set as crop supports under cotton, wheat and feed grain.

Butz said the provisions to which he objects are inflationary because they would hike federal spending.

Astronauts getting over motion illness

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The Skylab 2 astronauts, pronounced on the mend in their struggle with motion sickness, began catching up today on housekeeping chores delayed by their illness.

Although mission doctors said the men were showing signs of improvement, a space walk originally planned for today was postponed again until Saturday.

This delay will give Skylab commander Alan L. Bean, Dr. Owen K. Garriott and Jack R. Lousma all day Friday for rest and recreation.

Lousma, who has suffered the most from motion sickness, greeted mission controllers with a cheery "good morning, down there, space fans," as the crew's day began.

The astronauts were to continue a regimen of stomach soothing medicine today to prevent the symptoms from bothering them.

Haldeman claims tapes refute Dean testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former presidential chief of staff H. R. Haldeman testified today that he approved a $90,000 campaign budget for "black projects" prior to the Republican national convention last year. He said he didn't know what the projects were.

Haldeman began answering questions of the Senate Watergate committee after testifying Monday that he listened to two White House tapes he said refute John W. Dean III's testimony about two key meetings with President Nixon.

Haldeman acknowledged that he had approved a memorandum, dated Feb. 3, 1972, seeking campaign funds for White House political projects, such as presidential travel and mailings to special-interest groups. Among the items was $90,000 for "black projects" to be carried out by Charles W. Colson, another White House adviser.

Asked what the projects were, Haldeman said, "I'm not sure." He said he didn't think they had anything to do with previously disclosed "black advance" work, because Colson wasn't an advance man.

Former campaign aide Robert C. Mardian testified earlier that he was told the Nixon reelection campaign had an extensive budget for "black advance" work, which he described as political sabotage.

Haldeman said the budget memo only covered campaign funds that would be needed through Aug. 20, 1972, the time of the Republican convention.

Committee chief counsel Samuel Dash initiated the interrogation of the former presidential aide by asking a long line of questions about Haldeman's education, his previous associations with Nixon, and his role as administrative boss of the White House staff.

Haldeman said he ran a "tight ship" at the White House, reaching for a goal of "zero defects."

"We tried to do everything right," Haldeman said.

Haldeman, once the President's closest aide, told the panel in a 94-page opening statement Monday the tapes do not support Dean's assertion that Nixon knew of the Watergate cover-up months before Nixon said he learned of it.

The former White House chief of staff said his recollection of the meetings, refreshed by listening to the tapes, confirmed that many of the subjects Dean said were discussed were in fact taken up—but he directly contradicted Dean's version of those portions that would implicate the President.

Haldeman also testified that Dean appeared to be genuinely confused about a third meeting between the three men because subjects Dean said came up at that meeting actually were discussed a week later.

The Senate panel is preparing to go to court, probably this week, in an effort to force Nixon to release the tapes. The disclosure that Haldeman had listened to two of them immediately raised the question of why he should have access when the committee and special prosecutor Archibald Cox had been refused.

Later, the White House said two other Nixon aides—J. Fred Buzhardt and Stephen Bull— had listened to two tape recordings.

Haldeman said he listened to the tape of a March 21 meeting while he was still chief of staff, but the recording of a Sept. 15, 1972, meeting was made available to him in July, after Dean had testified and after Haldeman had resigned from the White House staff.

"I think it's a strange thing that Mr. Haldeman can hear the tapes, but this committee cannot hear them," said Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., chairman of the panel.

According to Dean, whom Nixon fired as presidential counsel, the Sept. 15 meeting was the first indication Dean had that Nixon was aware of the cover-up. That was the day the indictments came down against the original seven defendants.

The 34-year-old lawyer testified "The

Nixon, Tanaka meeting; major discussion scheduled

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon today begins a two-day conference with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan that will include discussion of a proposed American-Japanese-Soviet oil and gas deal in Siberia.

Nixon and his major Pacific ally are also scheduled to discuss joint approaches to trade, the Middle East, Southeast Asia, European security and the need for increased peaceful use of nuclear energy.

Nixon and Tanaka appear to be less concerned with problems existing between their countries than with finding ways of meeting problems affecting both nations, especially the growing oil shortage.

The two oil-consuming nations are considering jointly developing oil and natural gas facilities in Siberia.

Tanaka, looking forward to a trip to Moscow in October, expected to be briefed by Nixon on the recent Soviet-U.S. summit meeting.

Last year, the problem of China and the huge trade imbalance which was running the United States $4.2 billion into the red were the dominant questions in dialogues with Japan.

Since then, however, Japan has normalized relations with Peking and the United States has opened a liaison office for communication with the Peoples Republic of China. And the trade problem has been rapidly improving with estimates now running to a reduction of the U.S. deficit to around $2 billion this year.

Nixon will also meet this week with President AlbertBernard Bongo of Gabon, the White House announced Monday. Bongo, who has led the African nation since 1967, is in the United States to receive and honorary degree from Duquesne University. They will meet Thursday.

Slain youth's companion under psychiatric care

Paula Gail Lee, the 15-year-old Frankfort, Ky., girl who said she witnessed the murder of Mark B. Matson, 16, of Washington C. H., in a Dade County, Fla., home is reported under psychiatric care in a Louisville, Ky., hospital.

Joseph J. Leary, lawyer and friend of the Lee family, said Paula Gail will remain in the hospital for at least another week. He said he expects Dade County detectives in Louisville Wednesday. Leary said they will show her pictures of Albert Brust, the alleged murderer who claimed his own life, and other pictures, exploring the possibility that a second man was involved.

Paula Gail met the Matson youth at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and the couple was picked up by Brust while they were hitchhiking. Brust drove them to his home near Miami where he is believed to have led them to a padded room, ordering them to perform sex acts.

THE GIRL SAID the man killed Matson when the boy tried to resist and then sadistically shackled and raped her for nearly two days. Matson's body was found buried in concrete in a shower stall of Brust's house.

Brust drove the girl back to Fort Lauderdale on July 16, threatening to kill her if she told what had happened.

Brust's body was found five days later, in a lawn chair in his backyard. He apparently drank a concoction of chocolate milk and cyanide.

Police, investigating the suicide, found the remains of young Matson and the soundproof "torture chamber" inside the home. It wasn't until these discoveries were made that police believed the story Paula Gail had told in Fort Lauderdale five days earlier.

PAULA GAIL was returned to Frankfort before the discoveries after her mother told the police that the girl was a habitual liar.

Now, Paula Gail is being kept under close watch in the Louisville hospital. Either her mother or a nurse are with her constantly. "I might as well be in jail," she told a visitor.

The girl, who had run away to Florida from her Kentucky home, said she wants to get out "to play softball," but some of those closest to her are convinced that given the opportunity, she would run away again.

Paula Gail ran away from home on June 30, and along with three companions, was picked up 153 miles from home in Bowling Green, Ky. She was returned to Frankfort and promised to enroll for mathematics classes in summer school. A few days after being returned from Bowling Green, and being enrolled in summer school, she left with the same three companions.

President told me I had done a good job and he appreciated how difficult a task it had been and the President was pleased that the case had stopped with (convicted conspirator G. Gordon) Liddy."

Haldeman said the meeting did not open with "anything even remotely resembling" the President telling him what a good job Dean had done.

Dean swore, "I left the meeting with the impression the President was well aware of what had been going on regarding the success of keeping the White House out of the Watergate scandal, and I also had expressed to him my concern that I was not confident that the cover-up could be maintained indefinitely."

Haldeman countered, "I totally disagree with the conclusion that the President was aware of any type of cover-up, and certainly Mr. Dean did not advise him of it at the Sept. 15 meeting."

The March 21 meeting, which both men discussed in similar detail, was by Nixon's own account the source of new information that led him to launch his own broad investigation of Watergate this spring.

According to Dean's account, one of the most incriminating sessions he had with the President occurred on March 13, eight days before the meeting at which he said he gave Nixon a complete picture of the Watergate affair.

On March 13, Dean testified, "I told the President about the fact that there were money demands being made by the seven convicted defendants ... He asked me how much it would cost.

"I told him that I could only make an estimate that it might be as high as $1 million or more. He told me that that was no problem, and he also looked over at Haldeman and repeated the same statement.

"He then asked me who was demanding the money, and I told him it was principally coming from Hunt through his attorney. The President then referred to the fact that Hunt had been promised executive clemency."

Haldeman testified, "Some of what he describes in quite vivid detail as happening on March 13 did, in fact, happen on March 21. I seriously doubt that the conversation John Dean has described actually took place on March 13."

Haldeman said the discussion about the $1 million did come up at the later meeting.

"The President said, 'There is no problem in raising $1 million; we can do that, but it would be wrong,'" Haldeman quoted him.

The dates are significant because by Dean's account the President was aware of the cover-up for many months and cooperated in efforts to perpetuate it.

By Haldeman's account, however, the President didn't gain any incriminating knowledge until March 21, when he says he set in motion the investigation that led to clearing up the whole affair.

Haldeman's lengthy defense of the President was also a defense of himself as the man closest to the President and accused by Dean, Magruder and others of a leading role in the cover-up.

"I had no knowledge or involvement" in the break-in or cover-up," Haldeman swore.

Gas shortage end is seen

LIMA, Ohio (AP)—An executive of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio said Monday the gas shortage in the state will ease by 1975 with the completion of construction of new refineries.

Henry O'Brien, advertising manager at the Cleveland office, said shortages may worsen until new refineries meet current demand.

"We are seeing only the tip of an iceberg right now. Under the tip lies a couple or more years of tight gas supplies," O'Brien told Lima Rotarians.

He said the complete picture includes "this country's coming historic change from self-sufficiency in crude oil supplies to dependence, mainly on Middle East Arab states."

See trade surplus possible in 1974

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government trade analysts say the United States might have a small trade surplus in 1974, reversing a trend that began in 1971 when the value of imports exceeded exports.

The analysts credit the turn around to the two devaluations of the U.S. dollar and a worldwide economic boom that has led to a rising demand for U.S. goods.

The country's trade picture has been improving rapidly and a Commerce Department analyst has declared as outdated a 1973 trade-deficit forecast made just two weeks ago. The analyst said later figures indicated the deficit could be much smaller than the previous estimate of $2 billion to $4 billion.

The country had a quarterly trade surplus of $22.9 million from April through June, the first quarterly surplus since early in 1971.

Exports during the first six months were up about 31 per cent over last year, to an annual rate of $64.5 billion, while imports were up about 19 per cent, or an annual rate of $66.2 billion, which would lead to a 1973 deficit of about $1.7 billion.

U.S. trade was in deficit in 1971 and 1972 for the first time in modern history. A major goal of the devaluations was to improve the country's trade balance and balance of payments position by increasing the cost of imports and reducing the cost of exports.

The flow of U.S. dollars abroad to cover trade and payments deficits flooded the world with a surplus of dollars and was believed largely responsible for international monetary instability.

But the benefits of a trade surplus, if it occurs, will not be immediately apparent to most Americans.

Because of the devaluations, prices of imported goods, such as transistor radios and foreign cars, have gone up, but so have domestic prices because of domestic inflation.

The result is that the consumer pays more for everything.

By slowing the exodus of dollars abroad, the government also hoped to build confidence in the dollar overseas, which may serve to slow inflation at home.

The devaluations had the effect of making the dollar cheaper, because it took less of a foreign currency to buy a dollar than before, or, conversely, more dollars to buy a foreign currency.

Administration economists estimated the dollar declined in value in comparison to key to European currencies by 25 per cent this year alone.

Meat shortage by this weekend reported likely

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The president of a large Midwestern-Southern retail food chain says the nation's supermarkets will run out of many cuts of meat by this weekend.

"The cattle simply are not being brought to market," Lyle Everingham, president of Kroger Co. of Cincinnati, Ohio, said Monday.

The beef shortage has forced Kroger to lay off 400 workers in 13 meat-processing plants, Everingham said. He predicted further layoffs unless the Phase 4 price ceiling on beef is lifted.

The federal freeze on beef prices also was cited by a union official in New York City who predicted that "housewives of this city and this nation will find there is little if any beef and beef products to be bought anywhere" by the end of the week.

The ceilings are slated to remain on beef until Sept. 12.

One food chain, Finast, posted signs at meat counters asking customers to be "a good neighbor by buying only what you need so there will be enough for everyone."

The warnings from food retailers and meat processors of an impending meat shortage were disputed by the deputy director of the federal Cost of Living Council, who said meat industry pressure to lift the beef price ceiling would be resisted.

Direct and indirect assaults on the beef price freeze were coming from inside and outside the country.

The Iowa Cattlemen's Association claimed that Canadian meat packers were circumventing the freeze by purchasing cattle in Iowa and Nebraska for processing in Canada and resale in the United States.

Larry Kallem, executive vice president of the organization, said Canadian packers can make a profit because meat imports to the United States were not affected by the price ceiling on domestic beef.

In Seattle, meat packers from a dozen Western states charged on Monday in a federal suit against the Nixon administration that the freeze is discriminatory.

Calling themselves, "scapegoats," the meat packers charged that many companies will have to close or operate at a loss unless the beef freeze ceiling is lifted.

Reds nearer Phnom Penh

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodian insurgents edged closer today to Takhmau, only four miles from the edge of Phnom Penh and the key to the city's southern defense line.

Fighting was reported during the night within two miles of Takhmau, and a government communique said three villages south of the town were hit by fire.

Many people have fled their homes along the thickly settled road between Takhmau and Phnom Penh.

Other fighting was reported both north and south of Phnom Penh, but details and casualties were not announced.

On the south, the battlefronts were at the village of Prateah Lang, where a government armored force is trying to outflank the insurgent advance from the southwest; at Wat Sleng, on Highway 3 nine miles from the capital; and at Prek Ho, six miles south of the city.

Northwest of Phnom Penh, fighting erupted at the village of Kap Srauthom.

U.S. B52 bombing missions continued around the clock, pounding at insurgent concentrations and supply routes. American fighter-bombers continued to give close support to government ground forces.

A river convoy of seven oil tankers, four freighters and two tugboats reached Phnom Penh Monday night without losses after the hazardous 60-mile run up the Mekong from the South Vietnamese border. It carried fuel, rice and ammunition.

Safeguards on computer use pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government advisory committee today recommended new safeguards to protect Americans from "Big Brother" misuse of computerized information about their lives.

"Today it is much easier for computer-based record keeping to affect people than for people to affect computer-based record keeping," the 24-member panel told the secretary of health, education and welfare.

The report strongly advised curbing the growing use of Social Security numbers for personal identification and proposed legislative restraints to protect individuals from unwarranted invasion of privacy.

Although there is no immediate danger of a computerized intelligence dossier being compiled on each citizen, because of economic and organizational problems, public concern about such a possibility erodes confidence in government, it said.

"The public fear of a 'Big Brother' system, in effect, focuses on the computer, but it includes other marvels of 20th Century engineering, such as the telephone tap, the wireless microphone, the automatic surveillance camera and the rest of the modern investigator's technical equipage," the report said.

"Such worries seem naive and unrealistic to a data-processing specialist, but as in systems, the apprehension and distrust of even a minority of the public can grossly complicate even a safe, straightforward data-gathering and record-keeping operation that may be of undoubted social advantage," it added.

Showers in the wake of a cold front are expected in Ohio today, according to the National Weather Service, with a chance of the same situation continuing on Wednesday.

Skies were partly cloudy across the state Monday night and showers were reported in the northwest portion where Toledo had around a quarter of an inch of rain. Elsewhere in the state, conditions were dry, although showers and thundershowers were occuring in portions of Indiana, Michigan and Kentucky.

These showers are expected to spread east and northeastward into Ohio later Tuesday, ahead of a cold front situated Tuesday morning from Lower Michigan to Oklahoma. The front is forecast to move eastward into northwestern Ohio Tuesday afternoon, continuing slowly beyond Ohio Wednesday.

A chance of showers continuing Wednesday following the front is predicted, but the outlook for the remainder of the week is for fair weather, with temperatures a little on the cool side.

Generally fair weather is expected in Ohio Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Highs on Thursday will be in the upper 70s, warming to the low and mid 80s by Saturday. Lows will be in the upper 50s and low 60s.

Irish Assembly meets today; trouble feared

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The new legislative assembly meets for the first time today with one-third of its members vowing not to cooperate with the moderate majority.

Security around the legislative building in Stormont Castle on Belfast's outskirts was tight. British troops continued an operation launched 10 days ago to prevent the Irish Republican Army and Protestant extremists from unleashing a wave of violence.

Trouble flared briefly in Londonderry early today when Catholic mobs stoned troops who moved in to remove makeshift barricades thrown up to mark the first anniversary of the storming of IRA strongholds by the army.

People's Democracy, a Roman Catholic civil rights organization, planned a protest march on Stormont today. Officials expressed fear that either Catholic or Protestant guerrillas would use the march as cover for an attack.

But the greatest danger to the assembly, on which the British have pinned their hopes of restoring political stability, probably will come from within.

Solon enters guilty plea in mail fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Rep. J. Irving Whalley of Pennsylvania today pleaded guilty to charges of mail fraud and obstruction of justice.

Whalley, 71, a Republican, served in the House for 12 years. He did not seek re-election in 1972.

The government accused him of forcing 17 staff members to kick back portions of their salaries. Sources close to the case said the staff members kicked back 10 to 20 per cent of their pay for a total "ball park figure" of about $50,000.

The indictment charged that money was used to pay the salaries of Whaley's relatives— prohibited from law from being placed on the congressional payroll—and to defray the costs of his legislative and business enterprises.

Whalley, of Windber, Pa., maintained in a statement released through his lawyers that the funds from employes' salaries were used for office purposes.

Whalley, allowed to be free on his own recognizance by U.S District Court Judge John L. Smith, faces a maximum total possible sentence of 15 years in prison and $11,000 fine.

No sentencing date was set.

Nixon stand on tapes weakened?

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon may have undermined his own legal position against releasing White House tapes to investigators, the chief counsel of the Senate Watergate committee said.

By allowing H. R. Haldeman to listen to one of the tapes after he had become a private citizen, Nixon may have damaged his claim that the tapes are confidential presidential papers, chief counsel Samuel Dash said Monday.

Haldeman told the committee Monday that President Nixon asked him in July to listen to one of the tapes and report to him its contents. Haldeman had resigned as Nixon's chief of staff in April.

Haldeman checked the tape out from the Secret Service, took it home and listened to it alone, he said. He took notes and reported to Nixon on what he heard, the former White House aide testified.

Despite Haldeman's statement, President Nixon remains steadfastly opposed to providing the tapes to the committee and to special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox, a White House spokesman said.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon will continue to resist subpoenas for the tapes from Cox and the committee.

The President last talked directly to Haldeman in June, said Warren, refusing to divulge what was discussed.

Warren said J. Fred Buzhardt, special presidential counsel, and Stephen B. Bull, a presidential assistant, also have listened to tapes.

The tape Haldeman said he listened to after leaving office was of a meeting between himself, Nixon and John W. Dean III, then White House counsel, on Sept. 15, 1972.

According to Dean's testimony to the committee, Nixon indicated then that he was aware of the Watergate cover-up. However, Haldeman said the tape failed to support Dean's conclusion.

In a related development, Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill., charged that Nixon was obstructing justice and covering up the cover-up by refusing to turn tapes and White House documents over to Cox.

Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson later issued a statement saying from the outset "it was made clear that some documents might be kept away from the special prosecutor on the grounds of executive privilege or some other privilege."

But Cox, Richardson said, has "explicit authority to challenge such privilege in court should he see fit," a move Cox already has taken.

Charges filed in shooting

WELLSTON, Ohio (AP) — Police Chief James M. Downard filed charges in Jackson County Court today against two private undercover drug agents and a third man for a shooting incident at a bar earlier this month.

Downard filed assault with a dangerous weapon charges against William Myers of Cambridge and James Paristtie of Massillon, both employed by Multi State UNIT, Inc., a private drug investigation firm, and George McCarty of Wellston.

The police chief said Parsittie also was charged with carrying a concealed firearm and Myers with carrying a concealed firearm and a knife.

Downard said the agents were in the parking lot of the Duchess Bar July 18 when they exchanged fire with McCarty. He said an investigation was continuing.

Dollar shows improvement

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar improved today in all key European money markets for the second straight day. It hit its best price in several weeks in Frankfurt, Paris and London, but trading was light.

Dealers said the dollar has been helped by both the reduction in interest rates in West Germany and the recent support buying by government central banks.

In Frankfurt, the dollar moved up quickly shortly after opening from Monday's close of 2.33 marks to 2.35 marks. In Paris, the U.S. currency advanced to 4.12 French francs, up from 4.0887 on Monday.

In London, the dollar gained nearly a cent on the pound with the British currency quoted at $2.4962.

Gold was unchanged in Zurich at $115.50 an ounce. In London, the metal was down 30 cents at $115.20.

Taft backs Delta Queen exemption

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Robert Taft, R-Ohio, was among those urging a Senate subcommittee Monday to go along with the House in exempting the Delta Queen steam boat from marine safety laws.

Taft said the Delta Queen, based in Cincinnati, has proved as safe as "a piece of Americana that has touched the hearts of hundreds of thousands."

The 46-year-old steamboat has already received two safety law exemptions by Congress over the objections of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Coast Guard Adm. William F. Rea III, opposing a proposed five-year extension of the exemption, said the Delta Queen represents a fire risk despite $1 million in fire safety improvements installed by its owners.

William Muster, president of Greene Line Steamers Inc., which owns the boat, contends that the exemption should be permanent.

Muster said no human lives have been lost in a steamboat accident in the company's 86-year history.

He noted that a five-year exemption, already approved by the House, would allow time for further improvements to the Delta Queen and the launching of a much larger steamer in 1975 that will meet all safety standards.

Burr Oak lodge bomb threat hoax

GLOUSTER, Ohio (AP) — Vacationers forced to evacuate Burr Oak Lake lodge early this morning after a telephone caller said a bomb would explode in the building at 2:30 a.m.

Authorities said the phone call was traced to a phone booth at Glouster. No bomb was found at the lodge.

Ohio Inns, Inc., which manages the lodge, has been involved in a labor dispute over union recognition.

Blame for the oil shortage

Certain widely voiced suspicions about the current petroleum shortage derive some support from a Federal Trade Commission staff study begun two years ago and rushed to completion at the request of Congress.

The study portrays an aura of contrivance and connivance by major oil companies, raising questions as to how genuine the shortage is, and whether it might have been avoided. The majors also are charged with manipulating the shortage to drive out independents.

With bad syntax but good perception, the report says the oil giants "have behaved in similar fashion as would a classical monopolist : they have attempted to increase profits by restricting output."

This, coupled with efforts to reduce competition, is said to have resulted in the closing of an estimated 1,200 independent service stations during the first five months of 1973.

This is a matter of the broadest public interest, a circumstance brought home to all of us by regulatory and voluntary moves to curb use of gasoline. The study should serve as a stimulus for FTC action to increase competition in the petroleum industry.

Congess should do all it can to foster such action.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . by John P. Roche

A question with no answer

For a quarter of a century I have been trying to persuade my students, and colleagues as well, that just because there is a question, there is not necessarily an answer.

In the particular context of American constitutional law, for instance, often the only sensible reply to the question "What did the Framers think" about some topic under current analysis is that, on the available evdience, they didn't think about it at all. In a number of sticky areas — citizenship, for example — one suspects they deliberately ducked, figuring that their descendants could handle those for themselves.

In short, the problem is that sometimes we act as though we knew more about their "intentions" than they did. I have made this point before and apologize for the repetition.

But with subpoenas flying around Washington like paper airplanes and Authoritative Pronouncements filling the press, I believe the point must be emphasized that we are dealing with a political, not a constitutuional crisis.

If we take President Nixon's claims at face value, the separation of powers would provide him with immunity from a traffic ticket. At the other end of the spectrum, everything said or done in the Executive branch — however legitimately sensitive — is allegedly public property. And, to repeat, the Constitution supplies no answers.

TAKE THE NOTION of "Executive Privilege" for example. If you can stand it, let's take an excursion into the past.

Shortly before he left office, President John Adams packed the federal bench with Federalist judges. Their commissions were signed by Secretary of State John Marshall (who for six weeks doubled in brass by also serving as Chief Justice of the United States — an honest man, he took only one salary).

Unfortunatley there was not time to deliver all the commissions, and when the new Secretary of State, James Madison, entered office, he found several lying around, notably one for William Marbury as Justice of the Peace for the District of Columbia.

Whether he consulted President Jefferson on how to dispose of these documents is unknown — they probably went into the fireplace. The indignant Marbury brought action against Madison demanding his commission and the matter went to the Supreme Court in its original jurisdication.

The decision is, of course, famous for Marshall's affirmation of the right of the judiciary to declare acts of Congress unconstitutuional. But that is not our concern here.

It is what happened at the court hearing, which featured Attorney General Levi Lincoln standing in for Madison, who was visiting his sick father. Marshall, who had a sort of paternal interest in those commissions — after all, he had signed them — flatly asked Lincoln what happened to them.

IF LEVI LINCOLN had been up on his Constitution — Nixon style — he would doubtless have pleaded "Executive privilege." Instead he "took the Fifth," that is, he refused to answer on the ground that he might incriminate himself! Marshall did not correct him by suggesting he take refuge in "Executive privilege." On the contrary, the Chief Justice said he was quite within his rights.

A little earlier, in 1796, Madison's views on the powers of the Executive were on the opposite side of the Hill. The House, led by Madison, demanded documents on the Jay Treaty.

Washington, in a brusque reply (probably drafted by Hamilton) told the House that treaties were none of its business. Madison and Jefferson were annoyed, but they couldn't muster the votes to tackle the "Father of Our Country."

Now if anybody wants to take these pieces (and others I can provide) and tell me what the Framers "thought," I'll turn in my Ph.D. and take up farming.

WASHINGTON CALLING . . . by Marquis Childs

A lesson in foreign relations

SPRINGFIELD, Vt. — That slightly absurd term, foreign affairs, ordinarily connotes the corridors of power in world capitals and ministers of state flying off to summit meetings.

Here in the green hills of Vermont is a working example of what foreign relations can mean when practical men come together for a common good.

Springfield has long been the center of a machine-tool industry that does about 15 per cent of the nations's business. The three principal companies have the advanced technology that is one reason for America's great productivity.

They now have contracts with the Soviet Union for tool-making machines that increase their total output and employment by a substantial margin.

For a reporter who spends a great deal of time interviewing solemn diplomats in the corridors of power, it is a welcome change to talk to men who with their advanced technology have forged a small but significant link with another world. They have discovered in going back and forth between Moscow and Springfield how different the two worlds are and yet how much they have in common in technology and the problems of production.

A DELEGATION of Russian machine-tool specialists came to Springfield two years ago after they had seen the products of the Jones and Lamson Co., a subsidiary of Textron, at a machine-tool show in Chicago. That was the start of long and detailed negotiations, ending with a contract as thick as a good-sized telephone book.

The principal machine the company is selling the Russians is, to one who knows next to nothing about machine tools, a marvel of advanced technology. A cylinder of unprocessed steel is put in, buttons are pushed and the operation is carried on by a tape previously programmed by computer.

In a matter of minutes, as the tape ends, the crude steel has been transformed into a handsomely forged machine part complete with grooves for ball bearings and accurate to a thousandth of an inch.

The machines sold by Jones and Lamson will be installed in a tractor plant at Kharkov in the Soviet Union. They will turn out 72 pieces an hour.

The cost of each machine is $165,000, for a contract total of roughly $5.5 million.

WHAT the Americans have learned about the Russians — and presumably the learning process has worked the other way, too — is almost as important as the end result.

John L. Jensen, chief of engineering in the Jones and Lamson plant, has made 10 trips to Moscow to work out the deal. He found his opposite numbers very knowing about machine tools, shrewd yet friendly.

Once they had been convinced by watching a demonstration in Springfield of the machine's capability, the negotiation could begin.

The Russians wanted certain guarantees which the company could not give, since when the machines were installed their operation was no longer under the control of the men who devised and produced them. Once this hurdle was over the deal moved forward rapidly.

In the different approach to production problems that Jensen observed, one was conspicuous. The Soviets wanted a complete layout so that machines would move the parts on the production floor from start to finish. No American company would make that sizable an investment, since it could not be justified by a saving in labor costs.

UNDER the Soviet System it is not the outright cost of say $100 a month for each worker, but the social cost in housing, education, entertainment, etc., that the state provides the worker. The company replied that their best performance was in making a single machine, but if that was what Karkov wanted then okay, and the contract specifies the complete operation.

This is very small compared with some of the pie-in-the-sky deals for Soviet natural gas and oil trumpeted by high-powered promoters. But it is a demonstration of how, in that much-abused phrase, people-to-people understanding can mean practical achievement.

And to one escaping briefly from the furor of Washington it is good to see men like Robert S. Jones, head of the plant who worked up from machine operator and who has been twice in Moscow, directing the kind of production that has made the nation strong.

Slowly, understanding can grow. It can mean peaceful competition coexistence, a phrase so often invoked. That is the reality, rather than the loud political rhetoric of the politicians.

Ex-probation chief named in lawsuit

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The president of a public interest group filed a lawsuit in U.S. District Court here Monday charging the former head of the Franklin County Probation Department with false arrest and false imprisonment.

The suit was filed by Concerned Citizens Corp. President John Timson against Jay Smith, who was fired from the probation department last month by the Franklin County Common Pleas Court on a charge of malfeasance.

Timson's suit contends that Smith tried for several years to have him committed to the Columbus State Institute. He is seeking $50,000 in damages.

Make a check on your status

NEW YORK (AP) — Would you be surprised if people suddenly started cutting you up socially or at the office?

Well, you shouldn't be. It is your own fault. Unnoticed by yourself, you have been slowly losing status, and all at once, it seems, people have turned on you.

But they always turn against anyone who doesn't take the trouble to protect his status. In this world you don't need to keep your mind to be successful—but you do have to save face.

How can one safeguard his status? By checking it regularly. How often? Well, if you're the careful type, you'll check it as often as you should brush your teeth—at least twice a day.

Here are a few simple ways to check you status. It is probably triple-A if the following things are true of you:

You have a 10-room suite at the Watergate, but you don't have to testify to the Senate where you got the money to pay the rent.

A state official has arranged that the water in the swimming pool at your country place will be changed once a week at no expense.

They have just struck oil on your 100-acre hideaway island retreat in the Bahamas.

No one in your family has gone to Denmark to have a sex change operation in the last decade, and none of them is planning one.

Nobody in your old neighborhood pool hall dares play you for money anymore because you set the stake so high it makes their cues shake.

You get six free tickets every year to the annual policemen's ball.

Well, it's easy to see how a guy fixed like that doesn't have to worry about being snubbed. But what about the loser? How can he tell when his laurel leaves are withering?

Certainly it's time to do something drastic about improving your status if—

When you find a lucky penny, you put it in a gum-ball machine so you'll have something to chew on to still your hunger pangs.

Your wife hasn't spoken to you since you pawned the family television set at the neighborhood bar. And the bartender won't let you in anymore to watch your favorite program.

When you get on the front end of a bus, everybody else gets off the back end, including the driver.

Federal officials have turned a deaf ear to your plea that they declare you a human disaster area.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Mother wants to keep grad's new nose quiet

DEAR ABBY: For my high school graduation, my parents gave me a new nose. I had it done last week, and even though it's still swollen, I just love it!

I am going east to college in the fall. I will be meeting lots of new kids, and my mother told me that I shouldn't tell anybody I had my nose done. I told her I hadn't planned on wearing a sign saying: "I had my nose done," but if it comes up in a conversation, I am not going to lie about it.

She said it would be foolish for me to admit it, and she asked me to promise her I wouldn't tell anybody.

I respect my mother's opinion, and I know she means the best for me, but I just can't make her that kind of promise. This is the first really serious conflict we have ever had. Am I wrong? Or is she?

NOSE JOB

DEAR NOSE JOB: Mother usually knows best, but not this time.

DEAR ABBY: I am very much in love with Steve and he is very much in love with me. We plan to be married in September. There is only one problem: I am also very much in love with my job.

I'm a secretary and have been with the same company for five years. I intend to keep on working after we are married. I guess you could say I am career-minded.

Steve says before we get married I must promise that I will not work over eight hours a day, and I'll not work at all on Saturdays. Right now I work more than eight hours many days, and I work on Saturdays, too.

Steve doesn't think a woman can be married and have a career, too. I disagree. Abby, do you think it's fair for a man to ask a woman to give up something that means as much to her as my jobs means to me? I love Steve and don't want to lose him, but I also love this job. Please settle this.

STEVE'S GIRL

DEAR GIRL: It's all right for a girl to like her job, but if she is "in love" with her job, her love life with a real live man is in trouble. I don't think Steve's requests are un reasonable, but if you do, hold off those wedding bells. I hear a clinker in the belfry.

DEAR ABBY: Is there a way for a couple to be assured they will get the sex child they want? I have heard there is a foolproof method for getting a boy or a girl, whichever the couple prefers. If you know how this can be accomplished with positively no chance of failure, please respond at once, and I will send $25 to any charity you designate.

FATHER OF SIX DAUGHTERS

D E A R FATHER: Yes. ADOPT! Send $25 to your local Planned Parenthood chapter.

D E A R ABBY: Grandma wrote that she was embarassed because her grandson bragged so much about his war record, even saying that he had won 11 purple hearts. She should use an old Jewish saying next time "Junior" starts to boast:

"Do not make yourself so big
You are not so small."

TV Viewing

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This year's fall television premiere will be the most drawn out ever. And it might not be a bad thing.

Debuts of the new shows will stretch from Monday, Sept. 10, until the end of October. The reason, of course, is that the 16-week strike by the Writers Guild of America hit the studios and networks just as they were gearing up for the season.

All but a handful of the series are back in production. The remaining few will go before the cameras in the next few weeks, with probably the latest start set for "Kojak" on Aug. 22.

The networks have not always premiered their new shows in the same week. But one network isn't going to give another the competitive edge, and about three years ago they settled into the present pattern of all starting at the same time.

From the networks' point of view, starting all the shows together in early September makes a lot of sense. Summer vacations are over, schools are back in session, the football season's started and cooler weather and shorter days are just over the hill.

Most important, it ties the premieres into one neat package that can be efficiently promoted into an "event." It's much easier to generate excitement about a single premiere week than a lot of odd starting dates.

But it's always struck me that the networks are somehow missing the boat—and doing a disservice to the viewer and to the film industry.

The viewer is forced to gulp down all the new shows at once. Then by March—except for the midseason replacements—it's all reruns and downhill until September again.

As a viewer, I'd prefer a more flexible system of new shows scattered throughout the year.

TV for the film industry has become strictly a seasonal business of feast or famine. They scramble for a while then sit on their film. It severely limits the amount of work that a writer or actor or director or technician can do. Production that was not limited to a single starting time would allow the industry to become more stable and provide longer periods of employment.

School Foundation allotment received

A net total of $118,395.33 in School Foundation funds was allocated in July to the two districts in Fayette County, according to State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

The Washington C.H. City School District was allocated $71,690.72 with $1,773 deducted for school employes' retirement, and $12,849.69 deducted for state teachers' retirement for net receipts of $57,068.03.

The Miami Trace Local School District received a net payment of $61,327.30 after deductions of $3,364 for school employes' retirement, $15,492.94 for state teachers' retirement, and $4,334.33 set aside as the allotment to the County Board of Education. The total allocated to the Miami Trace District was $84,518.59.

The direct allotment to the county board from the state was $945.92.

A net total of $42,538,054.23 was allocated to Ohio's 615 city, exempted village and local school districts during the month.

Phone talks resume today

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Contract negotiations between General Telephone Co. of Ohio and striking employes were to resume today after a three-day recess.

The suspension of talks after three days of bargaining was asked for by company officials to review a new wage proposal by the union.

No details of the new proposal were announced.

About 2,800 Communication Workers of America went on strike July 16 in a dispute over wages.

Originally, the company offered a seven per cent wage hike while the union asked for a 10 per cent boost.

Since the strike began, the company said, service outages as a result of cable cuts and line damages have cost $675,000 to repair.

MRS. KEITH LINVILLE

South Side Church of Christ is setting for wedding

Miss LaVonne Coulter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter, and Pfc. Keith Linville, son of Mrs. Martha Francis, Earling, W. Va., and the late Mr. Linville, were united in marriage in the South Side Church of Christ Saturday evening.

The Rev. Charles Richmond, minister of the church, officiated for the double-ring, candlelight ceremony. Two seven-branched candelabra and a single basket filled with white gladioli, pink and blue Majestic eaisies with pink and blue bows enhanced the altar. An arrangement of pink daisies, fern and white tapers were in each window of the sanctuary. The pews were marked with pink and blue bows.

Mrs. Frank Creamer, organist, and Mrs. Charles Richmond, vocalist, presented a prelude of traditional wedding music. The selection "I Think I've Always Loved You" was sung by Mrs. Richmond while the couple were at the kneeling bench.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length gown of white dove-skinned satin with empire waist accented with lace. The long sleeves ended with a wide circular ruffle at the wrists. The A-line skirt had a detachable lace chapel-length train and chapel-lenth veil of silk illusion. She carried a crescent designed arrangement of white daisies, pink miniature carnations, with ivy and baby's breath.

Miss Rebecca Coulter was maid of honor for her sister. Mrs. Daniel McLaughlin and Mrs. Keith Gibson were bridesmatrons. The attendants all wore pale blue, formal length, knit dresses with empire waist, A-line skirts, and cameo neckline trimmed with blue lace. They carried hurricane lamps with pink miniature carnations, pink sweetheart roses, pink and blue baby's breath with light pink velvet ribbon.

The little flower girl, Leah Troute, wore a pink formal length gown with white and pink lace trim and carried a white basket filled with pink and white daisies. She wore pink sweetheart rosebuds with baby's breath in her hair.

Daniel McLaughlin served as best man. The groomsmen were Keith Gibson, Paul Hasselbeck and Phillip Johnson.

Mrs. Coulter chose for her daughter's wedding a peach lace knit formal length gown. She wore a pale green cymbidium orchid corsage. Due to illness the groom's mother was unable to attend. Representing her was Mrs. Leroy Morgan, aunt of the bride, who wore a green knit dress and a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Ethel Davidson, grandmother of the bride, wore a blue dress and a white carnation corsage.

Hostesses for the reception in Fellowship Hall at the church were Mrs. Sam Troute, Mrs. John Troute and Mrs. Walter Smithson. Miss Debbie Coulter and Miss Joyce George, cousins of the bride, presided at the guest book. The four-tiered wedding cake, topped with the traditional bride and groom and decorated with pink and blue roses, was made by Mrs. Sam Troute, the bride's cousin.

Pfc. and Mrs. Linville will reside at 467 Peddretti Rd., Cincinnati, following a wedding trip. He is stationed at Fort Knox, Ky. Mr. and Mrs. John Coulter were hosts at a buffet dinner following rehearsal on Friday evening.

Turn beans into casserole

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In these inflationary times when most of us are making do with at least one meatless dinner a week, housewives are turning to the versatile bean.

Virtually every country has its favorite bean dish, from the black bean soup of Cuba to the old-fashioned baked beans of New England, and a number of these specialties fall into the gourmet category.

Next to cereals, the bean is the legume family which contributes most substantially toward feeding the people of the world. With their high protein content, beans are a must in countries where little meat is eaten.

Beans have been with us for a long time. Broad beans, one of the world's oldest cultivated plants, have been found in Bronze Age deposits dating around 3000 B.C. And historians tell us they were grown by the ancient Egyptians, Greeks and Romans.

On the other side of the world, soybeans were being cultivated, dried and eaten 2,000 years before Christ's birth. And in Latin America, they have apparently been growing beans even longer. Beans remains have been found in caves near Ocampo, Mexico, that date back to about 4000 B.C.

The American Indian taught the Pilgrim fathers the trick of growing corn and beans together and eating them together. They also taught the settlers how to bake dried white beans slowly with a dollop of sweetner to bring out the full flavor.

An old-fashioned cook with the intriguing name Crescent Dragonwagon has written a delightful, informative book on the bean. Titled The Bean Book, it is published by the Workman Publishing Company.

The author, who lives with her cat, Bean Blossom, on a farm in the Ozark Mountains, hails the nutritional value of beans, but adds a note of warning. If you are making them the mainstay of your diet, she says, bear in mind the fact that beans by themselves do not contain complete protein as do meats, eggs and fish.

However, she adds, two incomplete proteins can be combined to make up a meat that has an adequate amount of this vital substance. Thus, she says, dried beans eaten with rice, corn or wheat products like bread or macaroni, or consumed with milk or nuts will make up enough protein.

New England baked beans have been a favorite of mine for years, but only recently I learned a variation that makes them an epicurean dish. The feat is accomplished by adding bourbon whiskey and a few other ingredients. Here is the recipe.

BOURBON BAKED BEANS

4 12-ounce cans baked beans
4 oranges sliced whole
1 lemon sliced whole
1 cup raisins
1 cup molasses
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger or ¼ teaspoon powdered ginger
1 cup Bourbon

Add all ingredients except the bourbon to the 4 cans of beans and place in a large pottery bean casserole. Mix throughly. Add bourbon gradually, making sure it is well blended. Bake in 300 degree oven for one hour to 90 minutes.

IS REAL ESTATE REALLY THE BEST INVESTMENT?

Perhaps your investment inclinations are in the direction of real estate.

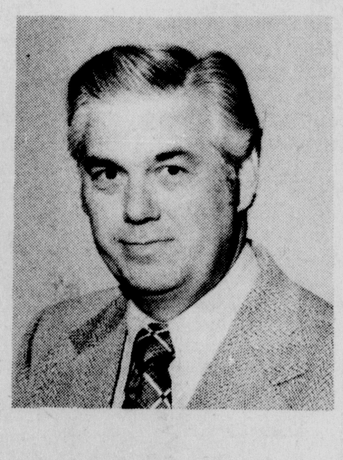

With the nature of our rising economy through the years, plus the growth of population and economic opportunities, the field of real estate investing has, indeed, been a profitable one for those who could afford the risks involved and who are possessed with foresight and aggressiveness.

Investing in real estate is a specialized business, often best left to the informed professionals.

But, if you do invest in real estate, know the risks and disadvantages as well as the benefits.

Get the best possible advice, first, and consult your banker, also.

We wish to congratulate all Junior Fair members for their excellent projects and individual success at the fair this year.

Best Wishes to Dan Lowe on being installed as Master Counselor of the Fayette County Order of DeMolay.

Congratulations to Nelta Baker, Jodi Whittington, and Lynne Rapp for being chosen to reign over the 1973 Fayette County Fair.

At The First National Bank of Washington Court House, we are NOT in the real estate business.

But, we've had a lot of experience in that field, and we do know the many matters that are involved.

Consulting with us will NOT cost you anything, but it could be the best move you've ever made!

Her chapel length illusion veil was edged with Venice lace and secured by a profile of matching lace.

The bride carried a formal crescent shaped heart bouquet styled of yellow rosebuds and Marguerite daisies with camellia foliage on a white Bible. A corsage was in the center, which the bride wore with her going-away ensemble. The Bible was a gift of her great-grandmother, Mrs. Bina Rude, Stafford Rd.

Miss Charolette Roberts of Sandusky was maid of honor, and Miss Daisy Woodrow, sister of the bride was the bridesmaid. They wore Nile green sheer gowns with waist accented with white Cenice lace. The fitted bodice featured a scooped neckline and sheer Bishop sleeves. Their circular skirts ended with a wide self-ruffle. They also wore matching Nile green picture hats, and carried natural wicker baskets filled with yellow and white daisies.

The mother of the bride chose a navy blue knit dress with black accessories, and the groom's mother wore a powder blue knit dress with white accessories. Both mothers wore corsages of yellow rosebuds and daisies. The grandmothers of the couple wore corsages of glamellias and stephanotis.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 1

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

A better day for your interests than you may realize. Waste no time getting started, but don't drive through, indifferent to the reactions of others.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

Your innate sympathy for your fellowman could lead you astray now, so take all factors into account if asked for favors — material or otherwise. Curb emotions.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Do not let unexpected situations ruffle you. Study them carefully and, with your innate foresight and ingenuity, you can solve all.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

Your personal ambitions may be dependent on some trends indicated in the day's news. Adjustments are bound to follow.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

Ideas and plans for travel may be running into some difficulty — especially if you have planned too much activity or have been too optimistic about costs. There's still time to revise, however.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Indication of some disturbance in job quarters. Stubborn insistence on your own way could further complicate matters. Give a little!

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Influences continue mixed. Some interests seem definitely "off limits," not as colorful as once deemed. Others will progress happily. Keep balance even, attitude thoughtful.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

A shifting of certain situations indicated; perhaps conditions altering. You should be in on the movements, plans. Express your opinions — but discreetly.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

You may trip over little matters if not watchful. Have patience and the "vagueness" or seeming inconsistency of things will clear. Manage tactfully.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

A notable day for presenting new ideas; also old ones carefully treated to get the most good still left in them. Your talents should shine now.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

You may run into some snags, obstacles, but you can handle them — and ably. As with Capricorn, pep up and old idea, keep your vision broad.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Day awaits YOUR move. Study situations carefully. The wrong turn could cause a setback, but the right one could put you well ahead of the crowd.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a lively mind, a dynamic personality, lofty ambitions and great dignity. You are capable of leadership in many fields, but must curb certain traits before you are able to take on such responsibilities, which require self-mastery and discipline. Don't let domineering, excessive pride or impatience cause you to be sharp with others. Leoites make outstanding executives once they have conquered these faults. Otherwise, their value is lessened because they lower the morale of associates and employees. You are ardent, romantically inclined, love to travel and enjoy the luxuries of life — which you are willing to work for.

LSH abuse under probe

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The department of Mental Health and Mental retardation was to pledge its cooperation with the courts to resolve patient abuse complaints at Lima State Hospital today.

The director of the department, Dr. Kenneth Gaver, was to hold a news conference with Atty. Gen. William Brown to explain the department's intention.

"We are proceeding with changes at the hospital, but want to state our intention to cooperate fully with the courts in resolving grievances at Lima. We hope the lawsuit will speed things up," a department spokesman said.

At least 15 residents at Lima State joined in a class action lawsuit against the department.

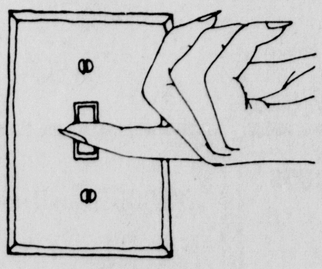

The suit contends patients receive inadequate care and treatment, deprivation of due process of law in commitment procedures and questions of the constitutionality of the law under which persons are sent to the hospital.

Whittington heads in-service program

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— Hugh E. Whittington, superintendent of the Buckeye Local Schools in Ashtabula County, was chosen to head the Ohio Department of Education's program of in-service teacher education Monday.

State Public Instruction Supt. Martin W. Essex said the aim of the program is to bring the latest knowledge, methodology and technology to Ohio's 114,449 teachers.

'Ike the Bike' promotes safety

By LESLIE HEWLETT
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — Bicycles aren't supposed to talk, but Ike, the pride of the Cleveland Automobile Club, does.

He tells students in kindergarten through third grade about bicycle safety.

George Tewksbary, safety director of the Cleveland unit of the American Automobile Association created "Ike the Talking Bike," whose voice is a tap recording in his head lamp that is operated by remote control.

"Always ride single file," says Ike to his children. "Ride only one on a bike."

Ike has 15 check points that light up, including horn, head lamp and reflector. "These are some of the safety features a bicycle should have," said Tewksbary.

Ike also tells children to ride with the flow of traffic not against it. "Most parents teach their kids to ride bikes like they walk," said Tewksbary. "That's a major traffic hazard."

There were more than one million bicycle accidents across the nation last year, Tewksbary said.

In 1971, the AAA conducted a survey of 1,723 cities. It showed that 850 persons died in bicycle fatalities that year, 76 per cent up from the previous three years. The survey also showed that three—fourths of the riders involved in the accidents were between the ages of 5 and 14.

In the first five months of this year, Tewksbary said, 21 more died in bicycle accidents in Ohio—three of them in the Greater Cleveland area.

Ignorance of bicycle laws is one problem, but Tewksbary and others in the safety field said the laws themselves aren't uniform.

George Usher, chairman of the Cuyahoga County Uniform Bicycle Code Committee, said representatives from 56 communities have been meeting since last fall in an attempt to unify all the bicycle laws in Cuyahoga County alone.

They seek agreement on nine major points, including the age of a child should be allowed to ride on a street, safety features, bicycle registration and violation penalties.

Ike stresses proper maintenance. "I keep my handle bars and saddle adjusted," says Ike. "I keep my spokes, pedals and chain well oiled. I check my tires, wheels and brakes regularly."

Ike has given about 150 programs since last March. Since his debut, said Tewksbary, seven other communities have asked for an Ike of their own.

Kroger pact faces vote by drivers

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Members of Teamsters Local 100 were to vote today on a tentative contract agreement with the Kroger Co., a union spokesman said.

The union went on strike against Kroger July 22.

Garlan Greer, business agent for Kroger Teamster members, said details of the agreement will be made public after the vote.

No progress was reported Monday in talks between Kroger management and unions representing striking clerks and warehousemen. Jim Connolly, president of Local 1099, Retail Clerks Union, said the 2,300 local Kroger clerks "are still respecting picket lines and will continue to do so."

Despite the continuing strike, William Whiting, company advertising manager, said the 33 area Kroger stores closed July 24 will reopen later this week.

Whiting said the 34 area stores now open will stay open using Kroger administrative personnel, wives and secretaries to man store counters and cash registers.

Each year, as many as 1,400 icebergs break off from glaciers in Greenland's Jacobshaven Fiord and float out to sea.

Top executives show well in pay increases

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — There's nothing like a good discussion of somebody else's finances to take your mind off your own. To fuel such a discussion, hoping it remains that and nothing hotter, consider this:

In 1972 there existed a 5.5 per cent guideline for wage increases. In spite of this, the total compensation of chief executives rose about 7.8 per cent, according to a survey by McKinsey & Co., managment consultants.

The survey was conducted among 592 of the largest U.S. corporations in 31 industries. The findings reveal that compensation rose 18.6 per cent in motor vehicles and equipment and 12.8 per cent in railroads.

"Only five industries failed to post increases," McKinsey found, "with meat products alone showing a significant over-all chief executive pay cut—a decrease of 14.3 per cent."

How could such a thing occur, seemingly in violation of guidelines?

The answer lies in the difference between salaries and total compensation, which includes not just the salary but the bonus and incentives and such.

"The fact that executive incentive plans are controlled separately from salaries under existing pay regulations accounts for why over-all executive compensation can increase by the 7.8 per cent that it did, despite a 5.5 per cent wage increase guideline," said George Foote, a McKinsey partner.

A separate analysis of salaries only showed an increase of about 5 per cent from 1971 to 1972, he said, concluding:

"The charge made in some quarters that executives have been lining their pockets at the expense of lower paid employes does not appear to be substantiated by the facts."

And here's another:

If for some reason you had the notion that business hasn't been good, perhaps because the stock market simply doesn't reflect it at all, you should be reminded that seldom in recent history have corporate profits risen so sharply.

Preliminary computations show that after-tax profits of corporations during the April-May-June quarter were about 30 per cent higher than in the same period a year earlier.

In publishing its own survey, First National City Bank commented:

"A rapidly expanding economy and easing of price controls under Phase 3 helped increase earnings at five out of six of the firms covered by the survey."

Here are a few of the aftertax corporate profits reported by Citibank for the first half of 1973 compared with the first half of 1972:

Paper 74 per cent, iron and steel 57, nonferrous metals 51, automobiles and parts 58, chemicals 40, petroleum 46, machinery 35, rubber and plastics 30 and textiles 29 per cent.

Anticipating such increases, Robert Parks, the chief economist for the investment house of Blyth Eastman Dillon commented in a research piece directed at the company's personnel:

"Price violations anyone? The statement ... by the Cost of Living Council that it has found only a few violations of price standards under Phase 3 is astonishing to us on a number of accounts."

He proceeded to list some of them, the first of which was:

"It runs counter to the overall data for several industries, which show rapid price rises, wholesale and retail, in the first half of this year, a large climb in total profits, and a significant rise in profit margins ... "

Many of the profit margins, he argued, rose above the average of the best two of the past four or five fiscal years," which suggested to him that more profit violations could be found than were turned up by the council.

Women's Lib brings Dutch dates

By ANN HENCKEN
Associated Press Writer

Women who once reached for their lipstick while their dates paid the restaurant bill might be as likely to reach for their money these days.

Not so long ago, the rule was clear: the man invited the woman and paid the way, especially in the initial dating stages.

But now dating is becoming more casual, and so are paying habits. Singles are inching their way toward a greater sharing of financial responsibilities.

The women's liberation movement, the questioning of traditional social structures that began in the 1960s and the rising cost of an evening on the town have made the difference, say men and women from New York City to Berkeley, Calif.

"Men used to accept cash under the table. Now, I just go up and pay the bill. They aren't reluctant about it. It's incredible how fast things have changed. In the last 10 years, they've turned upside down," said Kent Juhan, a slender, dark-haired receptionist in an architectural firm in Berkeley.

Women's liberation has brought some women to feel that they want equality all the way.

"Up until about two years ago, I never paid for anything. But I'm paying my share more often. I just like being more independent. By paying occasionally, I have more say about what we do," said Ellen Dayton, 30, who makes about $13,000 working for the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington, D.C.

Some men agree; others don't. But in most cases, there is no set rule and a thorny question can arise: Should the woman offer to pay or should the man hint for help?

New York banker David Smith, 31, suggests that women feel they're expected to chip in, liberated or not.

"There's a social pressure for a woman to assert herself and be independent. And there are probably a lot of men who communicate to their dates that they should pay their way because it's now expected," said Smith.

Other men contend that, because women are earning better salaries today, they should be willing to chip in.

Cost is a strong factor, especially the increasingly popular weekend date.

"I like to spend money on a woman. I like the male role, but when it gets to a $150 plane fare, it's a different story," says Charles Markarian of the days he used to pay the entire tab for a skiing weekend. Markarian, 30, is a garment manufacturer in Bergenfield, N.J.

Some men also complain that some women talk plenty about liberation but are strangely silent when the check arrives.

"Some women act as if Queen Victoria is alive and well. They'll be damned if they'll put any money on the table," says Sandy Bierce, a 26-year-old New York Stock broker.

Dayton man injured in rural collision

A passenger was injured in one of three traffic accidents investigated Monday by police and sheriff's officers.

Robert S. Long, 19, Dayton, was injured when a car in which he was riding collided with a semi-truck at 1:20 p.m. Monday at the intersection of U.S. 35 and Edgefield-Garringer Road, the Sheriff's Department said.

The car, driven by Daniel P. Long, 23, Dayton, was a total loss. It was eastbound on U.S. 35 and the truck, driven by Albert A. Wilson, 55, Jeffersonville, Ind., was westbound, sheriff's officers said. The truck turned left on Edgefield-Garringer Road and into the path of the car.

A travel trailer being towed by a van overturned at 1:20 p.m. Monday on I-71, 400 feet northeast of the Brock Road overpass.

The driver of the van was Janet Lou Carlton, 36, Painesville. The sheriff's department reported that the trailer began swaying from side to side on the road, then turned over in the parking lane. The cause was not apparent.

The trailer hitch was bent and the trailer was damaged on its right side and the inside.

A seven-by-eight-foot plate glass window was shattered at the R.C. Belt Co. at 1:50 p.m. Monday when a car backed into the corner of the building.

Police said a car driven by Steven E. Mitchell, 16, New Vienna, backed into the building, breaking the window and damaging the frame.

Burglars get little for their trouble

Burglars came away empty-handed in four break-ins investigated by police and sheriff's departments the last two nights. The theft of a box of tools from a truck was also reported.

The tools were taken from a wrecker parked in front of the Marvin Fredricks residence, 647 Harrison St., between 1 p.m. Sunday and 11:46 p.m. Monday.

Burglars tried to pry open vending machines at the Ashland Oil station at the corner of Highland Avenue and Elm Street Sunday night or Monday morning but were unsuccessful. Entry to the station was gained by removing glass from a window on the south side of the station.

The same night, someone tried to pry open a door on the east side of the Belle-Aire Beverage Center, 750 W. Elm St., but was unable to do so. The attempted break-in occurred between 12:34 a.m. and 3:55 a.m. Monday.

Another break-in attempt, this one at the Midland Grocery Co., 153 S. Main St., was also unsuccessful. It occurred Monday night.

Basic Construction Materials, Old Chillicothe Road, was hit by burglars sometime Monday night or Tuesday morning, but nothing was missing. A doorknob leading into the office was twisted in the unsuccessful attempt.

Colombia topic at Kiwanis Club's meeting

Mrs. Larry Loyd spoke at the Kiwanis Club meeting Monday evening, presenting a program of slides and commentaries on her home country, Colombia, in South America.

Following the presentation at the Lafayette Inn President Gerald Wheat called attention to the annual ice cream and cake social to be held on the Courthouse lawn, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Friday. He thanked members who worked at the gates of the Fair and presented a Distinguished Service Award to President-elect George Gibbs for supervising the project.

In her program, Mrs. Loyd pointed out that Colombia is about half jungle and half mountains. She said that the population is concentrated in the mountain areas to escape the intense heat of the lower land.

Principal products of the country are coffee, emeralds, cattle, petroleum and textiles.

Mrs. Loyd touched on the history of Colombia saying that it was originally a Spanish colony. In 1819, she said, Simon Bolivar is credited with overthrowing the Spanish rule in South America, thus giving Colombia the opportunity to establish a republic.

Press curbs surround plot trial

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP)— Tight security and tough press restrictions surrounded the opening today of the trial of eight antiwar activists on conspiracy charges.

The seven members of Vietnam Veterans Against the War and a sympathizer are accused of plotting to disrupt the 1972 Republican National Convention at Miami Beach, Fla.

U.S. District Court Judge Winston Arnow said only a pool of five newsmen would be permitted in the courtroom.

Twenty-five federal marshals, assisted by General Services Administration police, were assigned to guard duty and to operate metal detectors and television cameras to screen spectators and newsmen.

In a pretrial hearing Monday, Arnow refused to lift restrictions on who could enter the courtroom and reduced the number of newsmen allowed inside from 25 to five. He said the space was needed for prospective jurors expected to total more than 80.

Defendants in the trial are Scott Camil, 27, Stanley K. Michelson Jr., 23, and John Briggs, 25, of Gainesville; Peter J. Mahoney, 23, of New York City; Alton C. Foss, 25, of Hialeah, Fla.; John Kniffen, 25, and William J. Patterson, 24, of Austin, Tex.; and Donald V. Perdue, 23, of Hollywood, Fla.

Artificial heart poses problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — The long quest to construct an implantable artificial heart, drawing steadily closer to realization, raises a disturbing number of questions, a panel of scientists has warned the government.

Some of the moral, ethical, legal and social questions have the potential for emotioncharged controversy. The scientists said these issues should be resolved before the artificial organ is made available to the estimated 50,000 people whose lives it might save each year.

An advance copy of the National Heart and Lung Institute report, which will be published in two months, was obtained by The Associated Press.

The NHLI is spending about $5.7 million this year on artificial heart and related research and has put at least $36 million into the project since its inception. The Atomic Energy Commission is spending $2.2 million this year and has spent a total of more than $9 million since 1967.

A totally implantable artificial heart is now being tested in animals. The report said it might be as much as 10 years before such a device is generally available to the public, but limited human experimentation may be much closer.

"We believe that development of the totally implantable artificial heart should proceed," the 10 lawyers, doctors, sociologists, ethicists and political scientists said.

But they listed a series of issues that must be resolved that included:

—Cost. At $25,000 per patient, the artificial heart will strain current health care financial systems. Unless financial support is made available to all who need the artificial organ, it may become a life-saving device accessible only to the rich.

—Selection of recipients. Once the organ becomes clinically available, it is unlikely there will be sufficient hearts, implantation teams or medical centers immediately to accommodate everyone who would die otherwise. Selection should be made on a medical basis only, resorting to lottery in case of shortages for patients with equally dire medical situations. In no case, the panel urged, should patients be selected on the basis of "social worth."

—The definition of death. How will doctors determine the point of death for persons with a mechanical pump that can continue circulating blood after other organs have died, the panel asked. Doctors and lawmakers should begin now to resolve the legal questions, the report said.

In Fayette County

Social Security payments total $457,000 monthly

Social Security benefits were being paid to residents of Fayette county at a rate of $457,000 a month at the close of 1972, Harry B. Bieber, Social Security manager at Chillicothe, reports.

Of the Social Security beneficiaries living in Fayette County, 2,326 are retired workers and their dependents. Another 783 are receiving benefits as the survivors of workers who have died, and 371 are getting benefits as disabled workers or their dependents.

Bieber pointed out that although most Social Security beneficiaries are older people, about one out of every four is under age 60. In Fayette county, 729 people under age 60 are collecting Social Security payments each month.

Nearly 400 are under age 18, receiving payments because a working father or mother has died or is getting Social Security disability or retirement benefits.

Most of the 57 beneficiaries in Fayette County between 18 and 22 years of age, are getting student's benefits under a provision in the Social Security law permitting the continuation of a child's benefits beyond his 18th birthday, and up to age 22, if the child is attending school full time.

ALSO in this 18-22 age group, Bieber said, are some other types of beneficiaries, illustrating the broad family protection that the Social Security program provides workers of all ages.

Some are children of retired, disabled, or deceased workers who became disabled before they reached 22 and who will probably never be able to work and become self-supporting.

The monthly benefits of these young people, handicapped by physical or mental disabilities, will continue indefinitely. Benefits are also payable to the mother if the disabled son or daughter is in the mother's care.

Bieber added that another relatively small but significant group of youthful Social Security beneficiaries are those who are receiving benefits as disabled workers.

Newark mayor fires officers on 'sick' call

NEWARK, Ohio (AP) — Mayor Richard Baker fired some of the city's 68 patrolmen Monday after they failed to report to work, rather calling in sick.

The "Blue Flu" epidemic was a protest over wages and benefits, a union spokesman said.

In the meantime, some of the 62 firefighters also reported sick. Firemen were not fired by the Mayor.

Baker said he invoked the Ferguson Act which bars strikes by public employes in critical jobs. He said the continued absence by the policemen was a strike.

City administrators have not released the number of employes fired.

The two civil servant groups joined forces to demand a $1,837.50 per person pay raise over the next two years. In addition, they asked for a boost in their clothing allowance.

An attorney for a newlyformed coalition of police and firemen said the job action was only a strike in the mayor's eyes.

"The boys are on sick call, and they're going to stay out. If the mayor wants to hire 60 policemen and 60 firemen, then that's what's he's going to have to do," said attorney Virginia Weiss.

"The department is running as normal with men held over from the preceding shift and the men that did come in," said Fire Chief Eugene Malloy.

The job action began Sunday morning.

Tax probe turned down

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California's tax administration board has refused to investigate property taxes on President Nixon's estate at San Clemente.

The State Board of Equalization rejected a proposal by Chairman William M. Bennett Monday that it determine whether the owners of the Western White House property are paying their fair share of taxes.

Bennett called for the state probe on the basis of reports that the 29-acre complex in Orange County is assessed at $1.37 million this year, while the original sale price and reported improvements total $2.33 million.

The Orange County Register reported this month that the estate, owned by Nixon and industrialist Robert Abplanalp, has been undertaxed by $25,000 to $55,000 over the past three years. Orange County officials denied the allegation.

Bennett said he would pursue the issue at next month's board meeting unless Orange County officials take some action.

Switzerland had an estimated 20,000 major snowslides in its 1969-70 winter season.

Bibby blanks A's with no-hit gem

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Things are looking up now," said Jim Bibby. The Texas Rangers' pitcher couldn't have been any more "up" against Oakland.

He had his fastball up, down and everywhere else—within the strike zone, that is—and had the world champion A's flailing away helplessly.

And when the flailing ended Monday night, Bibby had 13 strikeouts—and a no-hitter!

Not only was Bibby up. So was his salary. Rangers' owner Bob Short, in a moment of exuberance that seemingly ignored baseball's dictum barring performance bonuses, gave the 28- year-old right-hander a $5,000 raise...not bad considering Bibby had a contract with the big league minimum of $15,000 on the bottom line.

Oakland's Vida Blue, a strikeout artist in his own right and an expert in the no-hit department, was on the short end of the Rangers' 6-0 triumph. He was the victim of Jeff Burroughs' grand-slam home run and Bill Sudakis' solo blast, both in the first inning.

Getting a no-hitter is new to Bibby—but getting close isn't. He's thrown a one-hitter, a two-hitter and a pair of four-hitters since coming to the Rangers in a June 6 trade with the National League's St. Louis Cardinals.

In the rest of the American League, the Chicago White Sox belted the Minnesota Twins 9-1, the Boston Red Sox edged the New York Yankees 4-3 and the Detroit Tigers held off the Baltimore Orioles 4-3.

White Sox 9, Twins 1

Jim Kaat entered the game at Minnesota's Metropolitan Stadium with a 29-10 lifetime record against Chicago. Now it's 29-11.

The White Sox sent Kaat to the showers with a four-run sixth as Pat Kelly walked, Jerry Hairston tripled, Bill Melton singled and Buddy Bradford tripled.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 3

Jim Ray Hart's ninth homer of the baseball season, a two-out shot in the top of the ninth, averted a defeat for the Yankees—but only temporarily. In the bottom of the ninth, Rico Petrocelli, who had hit a two-run homer earlier, led off against New York's ace reliever, Sparky Lyle, with a single, took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on a grounder and came home on Rock Miller's single, giving the Red Sox a 4-3 victory.

Tigers 4, Orioles 3

John Hiller saved Detroit's 4- 3 victory with a "pitch that never got there."

DOUBLE ACE — Playing in the same foursome in a junior golf tournament at Stockton, Calif., Dan Sanguinetta, left, and Joe Ferrari both scored a hole-in-one on the 145-yard eighth hole at Van Buskirk Park.

Bengals tailored as opener looms

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP)— This is the week Cincinnati Bengals Coach Paul Brown dwells on "tailoring" his football team—an alteration designed to find the best fit for a strongest suit.

"We'll be doing the little things, just tailoring the offense and defense," said Brown as the Bengals move toward their Saturday night season opener against Super Bowl Champion Miami.

"We have to adapt to the personnel and style of defenses we expect. But mostly it's fundamentals," said the 64-year-old Brown, who is entering his 39th season of coaching.

"We face a confident club with a lot of ability. Miami is doing what we're doing—putting the offense in—and I think that showed the other night against the College All-Stars. I don't think the Dolphins were taking the game too seriously," said Brown.

With the roster currently at 60 players, Brown said he expects a couple of more cuts this week. The two-a-day drills have been cut down to one as the opener looms.

Brown said the importance of establishing a winning spirit "can not be overlooked" during exhibition play.

"But we want to find out what the newcomers can do. Of course we'll try to do both— with and use new players—if we can," he said.

Brown has tabbed third-year quarterback Ken Anderson as starting quarterback against Miami.

"He's progressing well and will get a lot more things done this year. But he's typical third-year quarterback. There are no shortcuts to gaining experience as a quarterback. It's a never-ending trial. It all takes time," he said.

"We're still in the process of building our offense and defense.

"The Dolphins carry out both very well. They don't make mistakes," he said.

Willis, Girtons bid for BR title tonight

The stage is set for a show of strength between the defending champion Girtons and Willis Insurance in the crowded Fayette County Babe Ruth League championship race.

Willis Insurance and Girtons will collide for the league championship at 5 p.m. tonight at Roszmann Field. The teams will be matching identical 10-4 records in tonight's showdown.

WILLIS INSURANCE, coached by Jeff Blake and Steve Ross, earned a berth opposite Girtons in tonight's struggle by posting an 11-2 win over Jeffersonville on the Jeff diamond.

The loss was the fifth in 13 outings for coach Lawrence Smith's Jeffersonville team, which had been involved in the championship race throughout the season.

Mark Lamberson scattered seven hits in picking up his fifth win in seven outings for Willis Insurance. Lamberson fanned 13 batters and allowed only one extra-base hit.

Rex Coe cracked out three hits in five trips to spark a nine-hit attack for Willis, while Doug Maddux went two-for-four and scored three runs. Losing pitcher Tyree paced Jeffersonville with three hits and Sizemore clouted a double.

Eddie Deweese, Bob Wilson and Coe turned in fine defensive efforts for the winners and David Stackhouse made a fine catch to halt a Jeffersonville rally.

SABINA emerged as the champion in the Babe Ruth Minor league tournament by chalking up a 13-5 win over Girtons Saturday. The win was Sabina's 14th straight this season.

A solid 18-hit offensive show guided Sabina to its win in the tourney finale. Greg Hill and Dean Haley had three hits apiece while Bart Barter, Brett Everman, Ron Warnock and Kevin Dunn all had two hits.

Hill was credited with the win for Sabina after receiving help from Barber while Shane Riley was tagged with the setback.

Commissioner John Skinner said the Fayette County Babe Ruth All-Star tournament is scheduled to open Friday at Roszmann Field.

MT's ticket sale Aug. 13

Season reserved tickets for the 1973 Miami Trace football campaign can be purchased starting Aug. 13, according to Glenn Marchal, new faculty manager.

Marchal said that persons who held reserved season tickets a year ago can purchase this year's ducats Aug. 13-17 between 4 and 7 p.m. at the high school. Reserved tickets will be offered to the general public Aug. 20-24 between 4 and 7 p.m. at the high school.

Season reserved seats will also be offered at Miami Trace's annual meet the team night.

Reserved tickets will be priced $2.50 at the gate. General admission for adults will be $1.50 and $1 for students. Student pre-sale tickets will be priced at 50 cents.

Three annual city tourneys scheduled

Three annual city recreation program tournaments have been scheduled this weekend, according to recreation director Chuck Wallace.

Wallace said there will be a $2 entry fee for adults in all three of the tournaments. The junior division is for youths ages 17 and under.

The third annual city horseshoe tournament will begin at 6:45 p.m. Friday at Eyman Park. The tourney, which will offer first and second place trophies in two divisions, is rescheduled from last Saturday when rain forced postponement.

Bob Rodgers is the defending champion in the mens division and David Garringer won last year's junior division. The tourney will be conducted on a 50-throw, count all basis.

ON SATURDAY, the annual archery tournament will open with two classes in the men's division plus women's and junior divisions. There will be trophies for first and second place finishers in all divisions.

The men's division will have open and bare shooting classes. Donny Osborne is the defending champ in the open class and this will be the first year for competition in the bare class. Joyce Benson is the women's defending champ. Both boys and girls will be able to compete in the junior division.

Registration for the third annual city tennis tournament must be completed before Friday by contacting Wallace at 335-2012. There will be both men's and women's singled in addition to a doubles tourney. Trophies will be awarded for first and second place.

Wallace said the first round tennis matches must be played by Sunday.

Estabrook impresses Paul Brown

WILMINGTON, Ohio (AP) — Cincinnati Bengal Coach Paul Brown said Monday he is impressed with the play of rookie quarterback Wayne Estabrook.

Estabrook last year was named college division player of the year for Southern California while playing for Whittier College.

"He shows pretty darned good poise when he gets in there behind the team," Brown said. "He has football savvy."

"Furthermore, he's realistic enough to accept the role he has to play. He knows he can't just step right in, that he has so much to learn. He keeps charts of our play calls and completions during practice, then he gets to run the club the last few plays. We like Wayne very much."

Brown said he plans to use Estabrook behind Ken Anderson and Virgil Carter, his other quarterbacks. Anderson will start Saturday as the Bengals challenge the World Champion Miami Dolphins.

Brown said that rookie wide receiver Isaac Curtis, the Bengals' first-round draft choice, pulled a hamstring muscle in Monday's practice and will miss the Miami game.

The Bengals announced their third cut of summer practice Monday, rookie defensive back Hurles Scales from North Texas State. He was the Bengals' 14th round draft choice.

O.J. Simpson shows optimism

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

O.J. Simpson, recently recovered from a viral infection, now has a case of early season optimism.

"I'm optimistic about the coming season," said the Buffalo Bills' star running back, "but of course you're always optimistic at this point."

But Simpson, who has suffered through four losing seasons in Buffalo since bringing his football talents east from the University of Southern California, does have reason to think the Bills' football fortunes are on the upswing.

"I think I can rush for a lot more yards this season than last," said Simpson, the NFL's leading rusher in 1972 with 1,-251 yards and six touchdowns. "With guys like Reggie McKenzie, Donnie Green and Dave Foley (members of the Buffalo offensive line) up there, it's going to open things up."

Monday Simpson traded his hospital uniform for a football uniform and suited up for a full practice session.

The Oakland Raiders held their annual training camp Family Day over the weekend and became one big happy family Monday after the arrival of tackle Bob Brown and wide receiver Fred Biletnikoff.

Brown reported to camp Sunday night . Biletnikoff, leading receiver in the AFC last season with 58 receptions, reported Friday after threatening to hold out for more money.

In the only trade of the day, the Denver Broncos sent wide receiver Matt Maslowski, a 6-foot-2, 210-pound second-year man out of the University of San Diego, to the Minnesota Vikings for an undisclosed amount of cash.

The San Francisco 49ers lost a tight end but gained a wide receiver when they moved veteran Dick Witcher back to his old starting job.

Coach Dick Nolan was forced to switch Witcher, who was the backup for tight end Ted Kwalick last year, to wide receiver after losing three players at that position to preseason injuries.

Meanwhile, Coach Harland Svare of the San Diego Chargers said he may spare quarterback Johnny Unitas, 40, obtained from Baltimore in the off season, from the onslaught of opposing defenses in preseason games.

"I want him there in September," said Svare. "If there's any question about his physical condition for Saturday night (when the Chargers meet the New York Giants), he won't go." After playing with the College All-Stars, two-time AllAmerican Rich Glover from Nebraska, made his debut in the New York Giants camp.

"The Giants' defense with a middle guard is just right for me," said the 6-1, 242-pounder. "Sure, I have a tough job in front of me, trying to beat out John Mendenhall. He has experience over me, but I feel just as soon as I get everything down I'll have a good chance."

Minnesota Vikings' defensive back Karl Kassulke made some improvement but remained in critical condition, a spokesman at Methodist Hospital in suburban St. Louis Park said.

The spokesman said Kassulke, 32, who was injured in a car-motorcycle collision last Tuesday, was taken off a respirator for a trial period and doctors said he appeared to be breathing satisfactorily.

Jeff Firemen win LL title

JEFFERSONVILLE — The Jeffersonville Fire Department captured the title in the Jeffersonville Little League by downing the Colonial Sawdusters 4-0 Monday night.

The win was the seventh in 10 starts for the Jeff Firemen while the Sawdusters finished with a 6-4 record.

The combined pitching of Jeff King and Paul Prater stopped the Sawdusters on three hits. Prater had three singles and Lowell Miller had a pair of hits for the winners. Tony Swigert and Steve Higgins shared the pitching for the losers and Charles Dinkler had a double and a single.

In other action, Dinkler Plastic beat the Jeff Royal Blue 10-5 as winning pitcher Jon St. Clair cracked two doubles and a single. Tim Glispie, Curt McDonald and Tony Knost had two hits each for the Royal Blue and Darrell Williams was the losing pitcher.

Former top aides gain identities

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Was it Haldeman or was it Ehrlichman? Richard A. Moore thought a moment and then apologized to the Senate Watergate committee.

"I sometimes find it hard to recall which was which," said the special White House counsel who had worked with both for several years.

During the 4½ years that John D. Ehrlichman and Harry Robbins Haldeman formed the innermost circle of advisers around President Nixon, a lot of people shared Moore's confusion.

But the picture is clearer now.

For a week former domestic affairs adviser Ehrlichman, heavy-set and dark-browed, testified before the Watergate committee and firmly, sometimes defiantly, maintained his innocence and his rightness.

Haldeman, Nixon's former chief of staff, followed Ehrlichman to the witness stand Monday afternoon.

There is no confusing the two physically. Haldeman is tall and lean, his light hair worn in a crew cut.

But he's just as firm as Ehrlichman in maintaining he did nothing illegal.

At 46, Haldeman is two years younger than Ehrlichman, whom he has known since both were students at UCLA. But Haldeman's relationship with Nixon goes back much farther than Ehrlichman's.

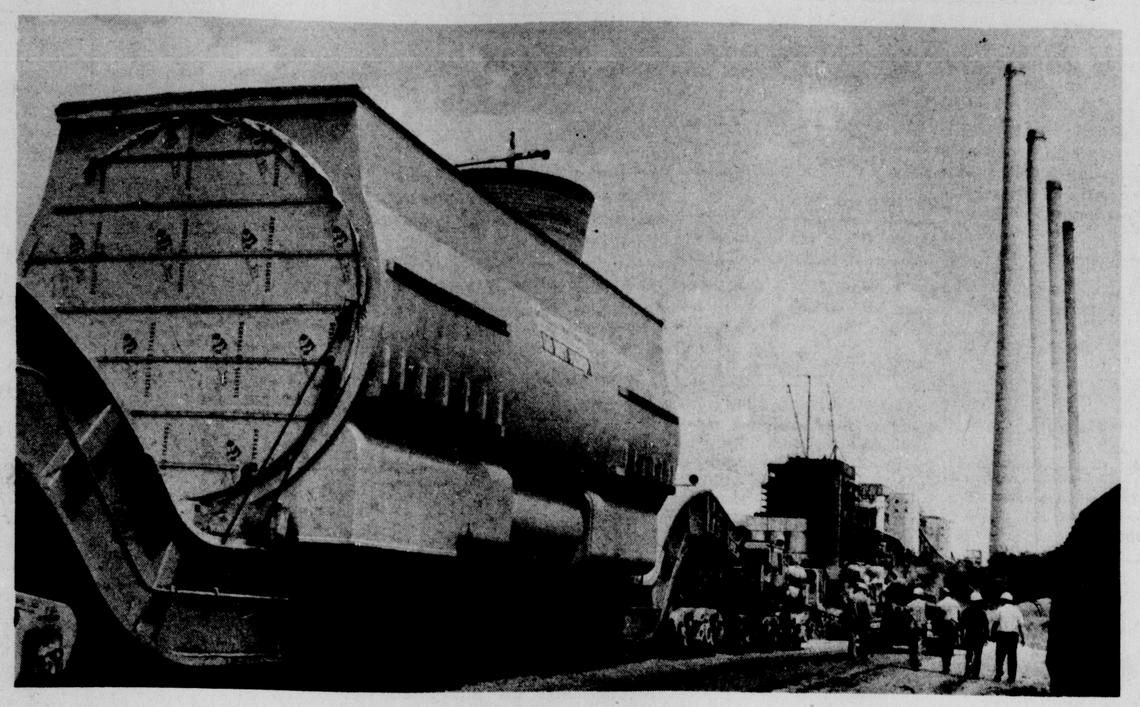

Haldeman was a voluntcer worker for Nixon in the 1956 campaign and has worked in every Nixon campaign since then. In 1960, he recruited his old college friend Ehrlichman.

Both men are Christian Scientists and neither smokes or drinks. Like the President, both wear enameled American flags on their lapels and Haldeman even shares Nixon's fondness for cottage cheese lunches.

Married and the father of four, Haldeman is a home movie buff. One of his favorite subjects was Richard M. Nixon.

On April 25, 1973, word got out that Haldeman was no longer presiding at meetings of senior White House aides.

On April 30, the President announced he had reluctantly accepted the resignations of Haldeman and Ehrlichman "two of my closest friends and most trusted assistants."

NEW EQUIPMENT — The fourth and final generator stator has arrived at the J. M. Stuart generating station located on the Ohio River. The huge stator weighs 660,000 pounds and cost 2 million dollars. When it is installed, in March of 1974, it will generate 600,000 kilowatts of electricity. The stator was assembled in Schenectady, N.Y. by the General Electric Co. It was shipped to Maysville, Ken., by rail, transferred across the Ohio River by barge and moved again by rail into the plant. Stuart Station is jointly owned by the Dayton Power and Light Co., the Cincinnati Gas and Electric Co., and the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. The station will generate 2,400,000 kilowatts when completed and will cost $390 million. The station supplies power to most of southern Ohio.

Priests hurt in ambush in Philippines

MANILA (AP) — Government troops in northern Mindanao are attacking Moslem insurgents in an area where an American and an Irish priest were wounded in an ambush, informed sources reported today.

The priests were the Rev. Donald Kill of Ohio, who had two ribs broken by a bullet, and the Rev. Patrick Riedy, superior of the Colombian Fathers in Occidental province, who received minor cuts from broken glass.

Father Kill, who was ordained about a year ago, was taken to a hospital in Cebu.

The priests were ambushed Friday north of Pagadian, a major coastal town in northern Mindanao about 500 miles south of Manila.

They were in a pickup van with a woman who had suffered a miscarriage they day before when rebels attacked a filling station in Tucuran, a small town, and killed the owner and his daughter. The woman and eight relatives accompanying her were unhurt in the ambush.

Frequent ambushes since the end of June have driven most traffic off the roads throughout the area Sur and virtually cut off the port of Zamboanga, 130 miles south of Pagadian, from its sources of food and trade in the interior.

The army attack was reported hitting the Tucuran area hardest, and several hundred refugees were reported to have fled to Pagadian.

The social welfare department is wrestling with the largest refugee problem in Philippine history as a result of the Moslem rebellion in the southern islands. According to department figures, 203,943 families totaling 1,125,159 persons have been displaced since early this year.

Love urges realistic stand on nation's energy crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The President's new energy chieftain, John A. Love, is calling for more "pragmatism" in balancing the nation's energy needs against protection of the environment.

"I am afraid we are faced with two imperatives—the environment and energy—and we cannot take an extreme view on either end," Love told a House Banking Subcommittee Monday.

He said it was no solution "to have all the energy you need if you can't breathe" or to have "the cleanest air in the world and have no energy."

Love had been asked by Rep. Garry Brown, R-Mich., "if we can continue to make the energy demands we have and still make the (environmental cleanup) policy commitments we have?"

"We are going to have to bring a greater pragmatism ... a greater balance ... to it," Love replied.

He said energy is important "not only to our way of life but to our personal freedom. It is so vitally interwoven in our life it is hard to realize doing without it."

In answer to other questions, Love said he didn't believe the oil companies had conspired to withhold gasoline supplies from the market or to raise prices, that Congress should hold hearings on the deregulation of new natural gas supplies and, in at least a partial agreement with Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., said government action had not furthered the success of energy policies.

Crane had asked specifically about the retarding effect of environmental controls on atomic energy generating plants.

"The number of nuclear power plants is far below those forecast as needed," Love said, but he said the reasons were a combination of "environmental concerns, siting problems and, to be honest, technical problems so that it has not come along as far as it should have."

Telegrapher pact readied

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tentative agreement with two unions on a three-year contract calling for an 18.5 per cent increase in pay and benefits was announced Monday night by the Western Union Telegraph Co.

Company spokesmen said the settlement still must be voted on by the United Telegraph Workers, which represents 11,000 clerks and technical personnel, and by the Communications Workers of America, which represents some 2,000 employes with similar jobs in New York City.

Contracts between the company and the two unions expired Friday night.

Red meat supply outlook darker

WASHINGTON (AP) — Domestic supplies of red meat for the rest of the year are not expected to exceed the supply of the last six months of 1972, the Agriculture Department Outlook and Situation Board says.

The board's predictions, announced Monday were much more pessimistic than those offered earlier in the day during a press briefing by Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, who contends the long range livestock situation is in good shape.

Butz said, "the cattle are out there," with farmers taking advantage of good range conditions and also delaying taking their animals to slaughter because the freeze on retail beef prices will not be lifted until Sept. 12.

The secretary, who referred to beef as "our national meat," said a glut on the fall market is possible and that could cool high prices some.

The two major points Butz and the situation board agreed on were a prospect for more beef on the hoof headed for slaughter next year and stillhigh consumer demand, which worked out to 115 pounds per person last year.

The board summarized the outlook for livestock and meat this way:

—Beef output will be down a little, and pork production will be about the same as it was the end of last year.

—With a 9 per cent smaller lamb crop, and a 15 per cent drop in summer and fall slaughtering, the output of veal, lamb and mutton will be down sharply.

—Larger beef imports will not be enough to offset reduced domestic supplies.

—Rising feed costs, bad weather, the consumer boycott and government price controls led to reduced domestic supplies and high prices.

—This year's beef calf crop is estimated to be up about 6 per cent, the sharpest rise in nine years, pointing to an increase in the 1974 feeder-cattle supply.

—More pork per hog is offsetting a decrease in the number of hogs being led to slaughter. However, since the lifting of the price freeze July 18, weekly pork prices have exceeded $50 to 100 pounds, an index slightly above the fed-cattle market. That level should drop with the lifting of the price ceilings on the competitive beef market, the board said.

Sears wins case separation from that of Stans, Mitchell

NEW YORK (AP) — Government lawyers have agreed to try Harry L. Sears separately from former U.S. Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and former Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans.

Mitchell, Stans and Sears, a former GOP leader of the New Jersey Senate, are accused of attempting to influence a federal probe of financier Robert L. Vesco, a fourth defendant.

The government prosecutors consented Monday to a separate trial for Sears because he "has made certain statements which would not be admissible to a joint trial."

All four defendants were charged on May 10 with conspiracy and obstruction of justice in connection with a $200,000 cash contribution from Vesco to President Nixon's re-election committee.

Mitchell and Stans also were charged with perjury before the federal grand jury that returned the indictments.

Oral arguments will be heard Friday on motions to dismiss the indictments. The defense claims that the prosecution improperly injected the Watergate case into the grand jury investigation of the Vesco contribution and that leaked news reports that Mitchell was likely to be indicted had "irreparably prejudiced" the case.

Vesco left the country before he was indicted and has rebuffed U.S. efforts to have him return and face the charges.

Vesco's $200,000 contribution, which has been under investigation by the Securities and Exchange Commission, was not reported at the time by Nixon's re-election committee but later was returned to the financier.

The indictments claim that the defendants attempted to interfere in that SEC investigation after the $200,000 contribution was received.

GM plans manufacture of Wankels

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — General Motors President Edward Cole says his company will manufacture 100,000 Wankel rotary engine Vegas in 1974.

Cole told University of Michigan students on Monday that development of the rotary engine is limited only by time and research money available. He said the engine has advantages in size, weight and the low number of moving parts.

Cole also told a university engineering and management seminar here that the Wankel will be able to meet federal emission standards, although he said they were the result of "legislative overkill."

Cole said General Motors has studied several different engine designs—including the gas turbine, stratified charge, steam and Stirling engines. He said the rotary design is most likely to be used extensively in the future.

"While the problem was intricate and sophisticated, several of the autos currently equipped with rotary engines have apparently handled it quite successfully," he said.

Cole said GM's engineers have modified the engine slightly and solved the sealing, emissions and fuel economy problems that originally plagued the Wankel engine.

The GM executive said a major problem remaining in the mass production of rotary engine cars is manufacturing—the cost of factory changeovers and machine retooling might be prohibitive.

American clinic aids in Turkey

By EMEL ANIL

TALAS, Turkey (AP) — "In the village of Kurukipru there was a woman in a cave, paralyzed from her waist down by Potts disease. For a year and a half she had not moved from the cave. Now she was eight months pregnant and had pneumonia. She is with the animals, two donkeys, five goats and nine sheep. Her husband sleeps upstairs in a room."

The woman was a typical patient of the American doctors at a missionary clinic here, the last of what was once a network of 12 medical establishments around Turkey.

Talas is a village five miles from the town of Kayseri in the center of the Anatolian plateau.

For close to a century, American doctors and nurses of the clinic have lived with similar scenes, treating an average of 7,000 patients a year. When Dr. William Dodd started the clinic in 1886, there was no other medical establishment within 100 miles.

NOW with state hospitals and over a hundred private doctors in Kayseri, the peasants still travel for hours on donkeys, old, beat-up trucks, or just walk to reach the clinic.

The present American doctor is Pittsburgh-born William Matthews, 42, of Winter Park, Fla. Unlike this predecessors, he is not allowed to make calls to surrounding villages because of a government ruling. He believes this ban has detracted from the spirit of the work.

The earlier doctors, who left behind journals and log notes, skied, rode horseback or used jeeps to reach patients in remote villages who were too ill to be moved.

The American staff at present consists of Dr. Matthews and two nurses — his wife, Marguerite, and veteran missionary Isabel Hemingway, cousin of novelist Ernest Hemingway. They are aided by a Turkish lab technician and some clerks and nurse's aides.

DR. MATTHEWS said the nature of the diseases has changed over the years. Instead of cases of cholera and other epidemic diseases which were rampant in the past, the clinic now handles mainly chronic illnesses.

As missionaries the doctors at the clinic have always concerned themselves with social problems. This attitude led to some sort of specialization in fertility work. Miss Hemingway said, "We realized that childlessness in the families usually led to the acquistion of a second wife or total disintegration of the family."

In the last decade family planning has started to work both ways, with the clinic advocating birth control.

Matthews says the birth control program has not been very successful. Despite a high population growth rate — nearly 3 per cent — the Turkish government has dragged its feet on birth control, fearing political backlash from the devout Moslem peasantry.

THE CLINIC, over the years, found its biggest competition from practitioners of folk medicine. Advised by the witch doctors in their villages, peasants have come to the clinic as a last resort after such "cures" as drinking rooster sperm for infertility, driving hot spikes through their legs for rheumatism, putting chewing gum on hernias and dog feces on diabetic ulcers, drinking gasoline to get rid of worms, or swallowin g worms so they will eat growths in the body.

The clinic charges patient $1.50 for a full examination. Poor patients are charged half and the poorest are taken care of free. Even with bargain-basement prices, the clinic is self-supporting except for the doctor's salary, which comes out of funds provided by the American Board Mission in New York.

The Talas Clinic, faced with difficulty in finding American doctor missionaries and construction of a new hospital-medical school a few miles outside Kayseri, will probably close soon, Matthews said.

Opening lead - ten of clubs.

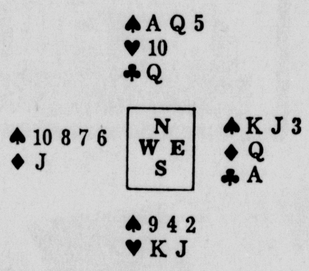

Let's assume you're in six hearts and West leads a club. The object is to make 12 tricks without seeing the adverse cards, though you know from the bidding that East surely has the king of spades and that relying on a spade finesse will lead to disaster.

The situation you face is by no means uncommon. The problem is to find a way of playing the hand so as to avoid the luck element ordinarily associated with a finesse.

In the present case you start with the knowledge that East has the A-K of clubs, and actually this is all you need to know to assure yourself of a happy ending.

Let's assume you cover the ten of clubs with the jack and draw two rounds of trumps, ending in dummy. Then, with malice aforethought, you ruff a club, re-enter dummy with a diamond, and ruff the third round of clubs.

Next you cash the ace of diamonds, ruff a diamond, and as a result of your machinations this is now the position:

When you lead the queen of clubs and discard a spade on it, East wins it with the ace and finds himself at the end of his rope. He is well and truly end-played. Your generosity in conceding a club trick that you obviously could have prevented him from making pays excellent dividends.

Treatment of Detached Retina

Can you tell me something about the condition called "detached retina of the eye"?

My uncle has had two attacks. Is there any way to prevent it or permanently cure it?

Miss T. O., Pa.

Dear Miss O.:

Detachment of the retina is one of the most difficult problems that comes to the attention of the eye specialist.

The retina is a fine, delicate membrane that lines the back of the eye. All images are concentrated on this remarkable structure which plays a vital role in the process of vision.

The retina can be compared to the sensitized film in the back of a camera.

Special rods and cones within the retina account for the finest differentiations of color.

A hole in the retina and the separation of the retina from its normal position causes sudden impairment of vision.

There was a time, not many years ago, when this very serious complication was viewed with tremendous anxiety by eye specialists.

Today, there are a number of highly refined techniques that can repair the hole in the retina and return the detached retina to its normal position.

One of the newest methods is the use of the LASER beam (Light Amplification Stimulated by Emission of Radiation) for detachment of the retina. It is probably the most intense light that has been created by man.

It can be painlessly used, without surgery, to penetrate and coagulate the rip in the retina.

Many other exciting techniques are being studied, refined, and devised by dedicated researchers working at the Retina Foundation in Boston.

It is hoped that the present activity here and in other institutions in America and abroad will eventually bring to light better ways of preventing these retinal tears.

Is there still any valid reason why I should not have been allowed to have my 6 and 8 year old children visit me while I was in the hospital?

I found that I missed them terribly and I really believe that their concern about me would have been relieved if they had come to see me.

Mrs. J. H., Maine

Dear Mrs. H.:

There are very sound reasons why children are not permitted to visit in hospitals.

The chances of cross-contamination (by germs) are greater with youngsters than in adults.

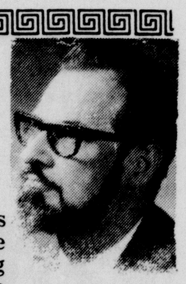

There is, of course, the additional factor that children become restless and may interfere with normal and especially unusual situations that can and do occur in hospitals.

A number of hospitals are experimenting with limited visits by children in order to reduce the separation anxiety you speak of.

It has occurred to me that closed-circuit television would allow children to see and speak to their hospitalized parent from a central waiting room in the hospital.

In Focus

by Charlie Pensyl

For many years now, people have dreamed of shooting their own home sound movies. Several companies have come out with "Rube Goldberg" systems that left much to be desired. One, I remember, used a cassette tape and worked like something designed by the federal government. The systems that worked well were out of sight, pricewise. That was the story 'til now.

The KODAK EKTASOUND Movie Cameras, the 130 and the 140 are going to change all that. You'll be getting a lot of promotional stuff on the new system, you know, the kind of stuff written for the num-nums. Actually the thing seems to be pretty well engineered and the price can be kept low through mass-production techniques. Until the government requires the manufacturer to add "safety" and "anti-pollution" devices to the camera and projector, the price will be within the budget of most of us.

There are two models of the KODAK EKTASOUND Movie Projectors too. One lets you add music, sound effects or comment to the "lip-sync" sound you made when the film was shot. If you want to know more about super 8 sound movies, come in. We will soon have a unit set up, and until then we can give you the dope on the new stuff.

Community Education panel hears progress reports

Reports concerning funds and the progress of committees were heard at a meeting of the Community Education Advisory Council Tuesday night. The meeting was held in the Washington C. H. Area Chamber of Commerce offices.

Kaye Bartlett, co-chairman, presented the letter of application to be submitted to the Mott Foundation for a grant to help finance the program here. Dr. Sam Lucas, regional co-ordinator for the Institute for Community Education Development at Ball State, is in charge of processing the applications. Dr. Lucas recently visited Washington C. H. to assist the council in planning the Community Education Program.

John Gruber, program chairman, reported on the work of his committee to incorporate all facets of the community on the council. The council will be composed of 45 members on a rotating basis.

Mrs. Robert Lee, publicity committee member, outlined plans proposed by committee members and asked for comments or suggestions.

Don Riber attended the meeting and reported how the Ohio Arts Council might be a possible source of funding. Bartlett urged that members interested in the fine arts be invited to attend the Community Education meeting.
